WALL ST. CLOSE

Today

Wall St. Cleans House.
Bigger, Brighter Suns.
Britain's Little Worry.
A Mother From Greece.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LAST WEEK, one good-sized firm went overboard in Wall street, and yesterday a Philadelphia firm with numerous branches in Pennsylvania suspended.

Some geese will shiver and sell their stocks, down near the bottom, whereas they should have thought about selling up near the top and should now be discussing buying more.

Mr. B. F. G., an intelligent young observer, says the man who lost money in Wall street in 1929, or since, feels like the mouse in a trap, baited with very nice cheese. The cheese no longer attracted the mouse, who said:

"To blank with the cheese. Let me out of the trap."

BANKERS WHO know what is going on say that the bad news is out in Wall street, and that there is nothing much to worry about now.

ONE THING is certain. The brightest days we ever have seen are nothing compared with bright days that are coming. There is always "something brighter."

Dr. Shapley, for instance, head of Harvard Observatory, says there are stars in space 40,000 times as radiant as our sun, so gigantic that their diameter is 186,000,000 miles. Think of those giant, brilliant suns, and the thousands of remote galaxies, each one a "universe" in itself, containing millions of stars.

THERE IS brightness for you. Yet time will pass, and before you know it, the list of prices on the stock ticker tape will look brighter than all those stars put together, to the wise man who invests conservatively, and does not gamble, now that prices are down.

PHILIP SNOWDEN, Britain's plucky chancellor of the exchequer, came from the hospital to the House of Commons to tell of his plans for the 1931-32 budget. The British worry about a deficit of $116,880,000.

What would they say, and how would they worry, if they had our deficit of $900,000,000?

They would wonder what possesses this government to go on paying off bonds ahead of time, when it is under no obligation to do so, and when any man of common sense would conserve his resources in a depression.

THE BRITISH Chancellor says there will be no increase in taxes, because he knows that trade will soon recover. When he says that, it means something.

Also as a wise Wall street gentleman remarked concerning the suspension:

"It is a good thing to have those incidents behind us. Everybody has been talking about them and knowing about them. Some brokers have acted foolishly, acting as investment bankers, forming investment trusts, selling them to their customers and carrying them for their customers. Of course, they had to suffer."

EVERYBODY HAS heard of Spartan courage, and remembers the Spartan boy who stole a young fox, hid it under his clothes, and never murmured while the animal gnawed at his vitals.

That ancient courage survives in Mrs. Mary Elkes, born in Sparta, now of Chicago. She has a child five years old and doctors said a blood transfusion was necessary to save the child's life.

"Take my blood," said the mother, and the doctors did. A few hours later that same mother gave birth to another daughter. The 5-year-old child is doing well, so is the mother, so is the new baby.

SIR EDWARD CLARK, British lawyer, dead at 90, wrote his own obituary, saying he had a "busy, happy life." It was also a prosperous life. London was amazed to hear that Sir Edward had averaged earnings of $952.500 a year for 17 years and in 1902 earned "what is believed to be the unparalleled sum of $1,350,000."

Nothing "unparalleled" about that. Louis Levy, rising young New York lawyer, can tell you about one lawsuit in which he got twice that "unparalleled" sum, and he did not work himself to death either.

Another lawyer, well known, reading by request a trust document prepared for the estate of a very rich woman, said after reading it:

"Excellently done, nothing to suggest, $250,000 please."

And got it.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, sympathizing with men in public life, from which he neatly retired at moment psychologique, reminds you that officials are often accused unjustly.

He reminds you that Chancellor Kent wrote, back in 1845:

"I think we have in Washington the meanest, mean, malignant, party hacks and tools, that ever were doomed to curse a republic."

Coolidge adds:

"Yet the country not only survived, but the government of that day is now conceded to have included some of our most brilliant statesmen."

ROOSEVELT UPHOLDS WALKER

Declares Charges Do Not Justify Removal of N. Y. Mayor for Incompetency

International News Service.

ALBANY, April 28.—Gov. Roosevelt today dismissed charges filed with him by the City Affairs Committee of New York demanding the removal of Mayor James J. Walker for misfeasance and incompetency.

In announcing his action in dismissing the charges against Mayor Walker, Gov. Roosevelt said he did not find "sufficient justification" to remove the New York City Mayor.

The charges against Mayor Walker were filed with the Governor on March 18 by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise as chairman and vice chairman of the city affairs committee.

In telegrams this afternoon to Mayor Walker, Dr. Holmes, Rabbi Wise, and Paul Blanchard, executive director of the city affairs committee, Samuel I. Rosenman, counsel to Gov. Roosevelt, wrote:

"Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt has decided that he does not find sufficient justification in the charges filed by the Rev. John Haynes Holmes and the Rev. Stephen S. Wise and the reply of the Mayor of the City of New York as submitted to him to remove the Mayor or to proceed further in the matter of these charges. A memorandum of the Governor's decision is being given in Albany to the press today and a copy thereof is being mailed to you."

TAX INCREASE PREDICTED BY MAGEE

Former Mayor Denounces Fiscal Policy of Council; Points to Rising Costs

The City of Pittsburgh's tax rate, already at a point where it is virtually property confiscation, is due for another increase in 1932, former Mayor William A. Magee told members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board at their weekly luncheon today.

Magee outlined the differences between the methods used by the city and private business, declaring that a privately owned organization could not exist if it were to adopt the city's present system.

His speech:

"The city expenditures for some five years preceding 1926 were carried on at a uniform level of about $20,000,000. Each year thereafter there has been an average increase of nearly $2,000,000.

"The tax rate has grown correspondingly.

EXPENSES MOUNT

"For the year 1931, an increase in the rate was avoided, although the expenditures continued to mount. This was possible because the City Council appropriated the $500,000 bank deposit insurance fund, and also because an equal amount was disgorged from the garbage and rubbish company.

"Since these two items of receipts will not recur again, the rise in the tax rate will begin a new ascent in 1932 unless drastic reductions in expenditures will be undertaken or unless new sources of revenue appear.

"This community's fiscal affairs have simply gotten out of hand. Private business could not live on the same basis.

"The curve of the city's total expenditures and the curve of the salaries and wages, not only

5 SENT TO JAIL IN NUMBERS LOTTERY

Admitted Sales to Woman Bank Teller; Sixth Man In Group Awaits Sentence

Five South Hills "numbers" lottery operatives were sentenced to spend from three months to two years in jail by Judge George V. Moore in Criminal Court today following their pleas of guilty yesterday.

All five were involved through the sale of lottery tickets to Pearl Ida Ferguson, teller in the Dormont Savings and Trust Company, who confessed embezzling more than $4,000 of the bank's funds to play the "numbers."

Patsy Martire, of 1916 Broadway, Beechview; Lawrence Bope, of Brentwood, and S. O. Thomas, of 1525 Woodstock avenue, were sentenced four months to two years, and Elmer Hart, of 2039 West Liberty avenue, and Fred Rothweiler, of 313 Winterhill street, Brookline, three months to two years.

Jesse Levy, of 1928 Plainview avenue, who also pleaded guilty yesterday, was not sentenced today, as District Attorney Park had requested a postponement so Levy could testify in a hearing of two other lottery operatives.

Miss Ferguson will be sentenced later for her admitted embezzlement.

District Attorney Park today amended the information against Rothweiler at the request of a man by the same name who lived at the address the prisoner gave when first arrested. The second Fred Rothweiler told Park that he was a sheet metal worker, and had lived at 253 Lelia street, the address given by the lottery man, for several years.

Park then ordered the information changed so that the prisoner's address read 313 Winterhill street, and had the Lelia street number stricken from the records.

PLANE TAKES STEEDLE FOR VOTE

McKees Rocks Legislator Speeds for Harrisburg to Aid Sunday Ball Forces

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, April 28.—Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, of McKees Rocks, was flying to Harrisburg this afternoon in a dramatic trip which Blue Law opponents expected would result in revision of the ancient statute of 1794.

Dr. Steedle, leader of the anti-Blue Law forces in the House, boarded an airplane at Bettis Field, McKeesport, at 1:05 p. m. after he had been hurriedly summoned by Representative Clinton A. Sowers, of Philadelphia, his associate in the fight.

SOWERS WINS DELAY

Sowers secured delay in the Blue Law test, originally set for 1 p. m., until 4:30, Pittsburgh time, in order that Steedle might be here to use his weight and influence in obtaining revision of the Schwartz milk delivery bill so as to make its provisions include a local option scheme for Sunday baseball.

The delay was granted as a gesture of sportsmanship on the part of Representative Glenn A. Moore, of Washington, Pinchot floor leader, who is leading the forces to prevent Blue Law repeal. When Sowers made his motion to delay action on the Schwartz bill, Moore seconded it and passage followed.

Steedle, on his way to Harrisburg yesterday for the resumption of sessions of the Legislature last night, was forced to leave the train at Altoona and return to his home because of the illness of his father.

BLUE LAW FOES GAIN

Meanwhile, with anti-Blue Law forces confident of the outcome of the test vote late today, a new trading gesture came to light as a result of which liberal supporters expect to draw heavily from the ranks of their opponents.

Mayor Langham, of Pittston, it was learned, called on Gov. Pinchot, asking him to release votes which heretofore have been cast for retention of the Blue Law in order that they might be swung over to the liberal column.

In exchange, it was reported, Philadelphia, Allegheny County and other members of the Blue Law repeal cohorts, would promise

Medals Don't Lie, But This Butler Story Is Strange

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Did Minister Bellegarde say that Gen. Butler didn't capture Fort Riviere?

Smedley has a medal that says he grabbed that tropical armory.

Do medals lie? Or was the fierce battle at the ferocious parapet just a cornerstone and a speech?

Is there a Fort Riviere? Was it in active fermentation at the time? Or was it just a day-and-night garage?

Did the Marines march up the hill singing "All the King's Men"? Did they march down again? Just to add to their mileage?

Are Smedley's medals another business that is suffering from overproduction? If there's isn't a Fort Riviere, why did Gen. Butler capture it?

More important, if there is a Fort Riviere, why did Gen. Butler capture it? Are jungle blockhouses to be taken three times a day like quinine pills?

Washington must know the answer to these questionnaires. Why did Minister Dantes Bellegarde say there isn't a Fort Riviere when there is? And why did Gen. Butler capture Fort Riviere when there ain't?

When Gen. Butler stormed the citadel was anybody home at the time? If you get medals for chasing Haitians, what do they get when it's their turn to chase you?

We must know. If there is a Fort Riviere, was it on a paying basis, or was it for rent?

History doesn't lie. But a lot of times it reads like a scenario.

BUTLER PLAINT GIVEN HAITI

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(INS.)—A "courteous note" from Secretary of State Stimson was en route today to the Haitian legation calling Minister Bellegarde's attention to the complaint of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, Marine Corps, and asking his version of his recent interview with the Washington Herald. Bellegarde is expected to reiterate in his reply to Stimson statements to the press to the effect he was misquoted and this is expected to end the matter.

Butler contended the article quoted Bellegarde as saying no one in Haiti knew Fort Riviere, for the capture of which in 1915 Butler was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, ever existed. Butler claimed Bellegarde's alleged statement belittled his record as a soldier.

Aimee Reported Married To Hungarian Count

By FREDERICK K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

PARIS, April 28.—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, world-famed evangelist of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, who is now in Marseilles with her daughter and son-in-law on a round-the-world trip, refused to confirm or deny reports emanating from Cairo that she had been married to a Hungarian count while in Alexandria, Egypt.

Mrs. McPherson, reached by International News Service by telephone, declined to make any direct comment on the rumors, but intimated there probably had been a confusion of her name with that of her daughter, Roberta, who was married on March 4 to Bradley Smith, purser of the Dollar liner President Wilson, at Singapore. Mrs. McPherson inquired sharply:

"Who told you that?"

"I have nothing to say, and I'll tell you why. It is because I have tried to keep out of the public eye ever since my physical breakdown.

"I am here with my daughter and son-in-law. We intended to go to Spain, but the revolution in that country changed our plans. Perhaps we will go to Algeria, but that is not certain. All I want is to be left alone and forgotten until my health has improved."

Mrs. McPherson then handed the telephone to her daughter, who told the correspondent about her marriage at Singapore. Her parting words were:

"It's nobody's business, anyway."

Formerly the meeting place for politicians in Diamond street, the restaurant was moved about 15 years ago to Graeme street.

MELLON IGNORES CONGRESSMAN'S IMPEACHMENT THREAT

OFFICE HELD ILLEGALLY, SAYS TEXAN

Patman Charges Secretary's Trade Interests Bar Him; Will Launch House Fight

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Published threats of Representative Patman (Dem.), of Texas, that he would seek the impeachment of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon when Congress meets were not taken seriously at the treasury today.

This is not the first time enemies of the secretary have sought his removal or demanded his resignation. Mellon never has expressed more than mild surprise at such demand, and it was not expected that he would comment on the present case.

NEED BUSINESS MAN

Friends of Mellon said that selection of a secretary of the Treasury, an official who directs the handling of billions of dollars annually, the Federal Reserve System, the Public Health Service and other activities, is not ordinarily made from the ranks of those who are without experience in big business. Furthermore, it would be unlikely that a man so selected should divest himself of all his wealth.

None denied that Mellon was one of the richest men in the world—that he had large interests, including the Aluminum Company of America, the Gulf Oil Company, and many other corporations as charged by Patman. However, on taking office in 1921 Mellon retired from active management of these institutions. This was considered in conformity with the law.

PATMAN CHARGE

Patman charged Mellon was interested in the "business of trade or commerce" and was a part owner of one or more seagoing vessels. The law forbids such a person from serving as Secretary of the Treasury, and makes him subject to impeachment, Patman said.

The Congressman said impeachment would be the only way to oust Mellon, because President Hoover intended to refuse to submit his name to the Senate again for confirmation. President Hoover was declared to have cited precedent to show Mellon can continue to hold office without additional confirmation.

Patman predicted he would get considerable support for his resolution "from the friends of the war veterans and from those who want to see prosperity restored."

TWO CONVICTED IN AUTO DEATHS

A verdict of involuntary manslaughter was returned by a jury in Criminal Court today against Hugh L. Benton, Negro, of Horning, charged with the death of Miss Jennie Wagner, 18, of Horning, in an automobile accident last February.

SCHOOLEY AIDE ADMITS THEFT

Charles Solomon, 28, of 1612 Bedford avenue, clerk in City Treasurer Roy Schooley's office, pleaded guilty in Criminal Court today to charges of embezzlement and forgery. Sentence was deferred by Judge George V. Moore until June 19, pending efforts of Solomon to make restitution.

Solomon admitted that he had obtained about $3,000 from friends through the issuance of "forged tax receipts." He said that he had lost most of the money gambling.

DOCTOR FREED BY KIDNAPERS

ST. LOUIS, April 28.—(INS.)—The dramatic episode of the "doctor's disappearance" came to an abrupt climax here today when police announced that Dr. Isaac Kelley, prominent physician missing for more than a week, had been released by his captors.

Lieut. Coakley, of the headquarters homicide squad, was dispatched to the home of John T. Rogers, St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter, where Dr. Kelley was reported to be to investigate the return of the doctor, according to police. The doctor was turned over to the reporter on a country road early today.

The physician disappeared on the night of Monday, April 20, when he put duty before comfort and drove into a blustering spring rain and windstorm to answer what is believed to have been a fake sick call.

208 DEATHS DUE TO POISON RUM

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP.)—A wave of 208 deaths during the winter, attributed directly to the drinking of wood alcohol or synthetic methanol, was disclosed today by the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol.

Commissioner Doran said an even greater number of deaths believed due to a similar cause were under investigation, but that 208 already had been certified through an elaborate survey of state officials and coroners.

The investigation has been under way for months. It was undertaken to determine whether there was improper handling of completely denatured alcohol made under government supervision.

Attorney Harry A. Estep, former congressman, today applied for a new trial for Dominic Ciquegrani, of Graphic street, convicted by a jury in Criminal Court last week of writing numbers. Public attention was focused on Ciquegrani's case when he named City Detectives James Noon and Robert Burke as his employers. Both have been exonerated of the charge.

Begin Unloading Of Soviet Lumber

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 28.—(AP.)—Unloading of 3,200,000 feet of Soviet lumber which arrived in this port last Thursday aboard the Finnish tramp steamer Anversoise started today, immediately after a bond of approximately $35,200 covering the foreign value of the cargo plus the $3,200 tariff duty was filed at the custom house. Under Secretary of the Treasury Mills, said departmental investigation had failed to show any evidence that the lumber had been produced by convict labor.

WOMAN'S GLOVE CLUE IN SHOTS AT DIAMOND

Found in Abandoned Auto With Guns Believed Used In Attack on Racketeer

CATSKILL, N. Y., April 28.—(AP.)—An automobile in which was found two shotguns which police believe were used in the shooting of Jack (Legs) Diamond was discovered on a street of this village today. Three revolvers and a woman's glove also were found in the car, a black sedan bearing a New York City license.

ALBANY, April 28.—(INS.)—Jack (Legs) Diamond, shot five times from ambush, was in critical condition today. Physicians planned a blood transfusion in an effort to save his life.

SLIGHT IMPROVEMENT

The New York gangster showed some slight improvement during the early morning hours, but physicians said that at least one of the heavy slugs which felled him yesterday at Aratoga Inn near Cairo, N. Y., had entered his lungs and they were not optimistic concerning his recovery.

Dr. T. M. Holmes, the racketeer's doctor, said:

"There is a chance of pneumonia. He is conscious, but he has to be shaken to get him to open his eyes."

Meanwhile state troopers took charge of the investigation of the shooting, but were unable to say who shot Diamond or why. The troopers are under command of Attorney General Bennett, named to supersede the district attorney of Greene County by order of Gov. Roosevelt.

TELLS USUAL STORY

Diamond told the usual story of the dying gangster. He said he did not know who shot him and murmured he "did not have an enemy in the world."

One theory advanced for the shooting was Diamond's racketeering activities in the section near his home at Acra, N. Y. Another theory, this favored by state troopers, was that he was involved in a fight over an Albany beer racket.

PENOWA RELIEF WELL IN HAND

Relief work at Penowa is well organized and by the end of the week the Helping Hand expects to have the Washington County authorities in charge of the destitute there.

Tomorrow the Helping Hand representatives will meet the authorities of Washington County to arrange for the transfer. Attorney H. I. Miller, of the Helping Hand, however, in making this announcement, said the organization would still keep in touch with the situation and lend additional aid if necessary and would continue to receive donations for the needy at Penowa. The Helping Hand, he explained, is solely an association for emergencies and with the relief work well in hand at Penowa the emergency has passed.

J. C. Trees, chairman of the Helping Hand committee, will donate all the seeds necessary for the Penowa gardens, and an inventory of the residents' needs in this direction is now being made. Walter Rosenbaum, member of the executive committee, has been appointed to work in conjunction with the committee of food merchants organized last week, to purchase clothing and articles aside from food, necessary for the relief of the Penowa destitute.

support for bill 1905—one which would rip out the appointive assessors in Luzerne County and make them elective.

The trading scheme, believed to have originated with Senator James J. Coyne, who is behind stage directing the liberal group, was supposedly put up to Judge John Fine, political leader of Luzerne.

Both Coyne and Fine are close to Pinchot, and believe that the exchange would put over two bills, one the Luzerne measure desired by the Governor and the other, considered not too desirable, although the baseball amendment would be local option, for which principle the Governor has spoken before.

SCHUYLKILL AID

Additional help is expected from Schuylkill County. It was also learned promises were made to exchange votes on the Bechtel resolution calling for a $5,000 appropriation to defray the expenses of a Valley Forge ceremony, at which President Hoover is expected to speak.

The Luzerne vote is expected to throw to the Blue Law foes the final strength they need.

Sowers predicted today:

"The amendment is going to pass. We are going to win."

The churchmen's lobby has been particularly active in attempting to stem the tide of liberal votes, growing for the past three weeks.

TO OFFER AMENDMENT

Sowers, who has maneuvered the Schwartz bill out of the Law and Order Committee under a screen of technical language, plans to offer the following amendment:

"Nor to prohibit playing baseball games, with or without admission charges, or voluntary collections taken during the months of May, June, July, August and September, on Sunday between the hours of 2 and 5:30 by the clock, post meridian, and provided nevertheless and it is further enacted that every municipality, city, borough, town and township of this commonwealth is hereby given full power and authority to enact, adopt, amend or repeal an ordinance relating to the playing or prohibit playing of baseball on Sunday in such manner and form during and between the hours of 2 and 5:30, o'clock, post meridian, as to them, the said municipality, city, borough, town and township shall deem proper and to specify and provide therein penalties for the violation of such ordinance and which penalties shall be enforced as now provided by existing law."

In essence, the amendment would permit any municipality to enact a Sunday baseball law or ordinance permitting such sport between the hours of 2 and 5:30 p. m. Sunday.

NAME CALVERT GUARDIANS

The committee to handle the affairs of Attorney George H. Calvert, adjudged mentally incompetent, was appointed today by Judge Sylvester J. Snee. The court named Calvert's wife, Mrs. Virginia Calvert, Charles J. Trefaller and the Potter Title and Trust Company.

Two physicians, Dr. James P. McKelvy and Dr. George J. Wright, testified that Calvert was mentally incompetent.

Appointment of the committee probably means that the disbarment proceedings brought against Calvert for alleged mishandling of the $3,500,000 estate of Mrs. Eleanor Davidson will be dropped. Former Judge Henry G. Wasson, also charged with mismanagement of the same estate, has been disbarred from every court in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Calvert and Harry C. Calvert and J. Edward Calvert, brothers of the attorney, asked for the committee. They said Calvert owned property valued at $250,000, with encumbrances against it of $175,000.

Taken From Lockup To Hospital, Dies

Morgue attaches today were endeavoring to establish the identity of a man, about 50, pronounced dead at Passavant Hospital after being taken from a cell in the Center Avenue Police Station last night.

He had been arrested a short time before on a charge of drunkenness, police said. An autopsy at the morgue revealed acute alcoholism as the cause, it was reported.

COUNCIL SET FOR NEW PROBE

Evans Charges Against Garbage Costs to Be Aired Tomorrow; Tests Delayed

As City Council today prepared the stage for the public investigation of Henry Oliver Evans' charges that the cost of removing garbage and rubbish from Pittsburgh homes is still excessive, other high lights in the triple probe of administration activities were these:

Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin holds up comparison of samples of foodstuffs delivered at City Home at Mayview by the L. H. Parke Company, pending receipt of table of weights and measures of canned foods, with and without liquids.

PROBE METHODS

The engineers' committee, named to investigate methods and technical phases in the Department of Public Works, as result of disclosures in sweeping inquiry which closed last week, will confine its quiz to an investigation of contract forms and methods of estimating quantities, S. A. Taylor, committee chairman announced.

Director Edward G. Lang asks City Council for permission to increase the Eleventh street improvement contract price now, let to R. D. Thomas Company, from $50,000 to $66,000. This increase is due to undiscovered sub-soil conditions Director Lang stated. Increased quantities such as this revealed by Director Lang was one of the points stressed by Attorney Evans in the Public Works investigation.

SEEKS INSPECTION

The Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory has asked City Council for the work of inspecting city construction projects. The present method, the request points out, has "resulted in defective and substandard workmanship" and adds that charges of favoritism and collusion on part of inspectors and contractors would be eliminated with an outside concern performing this function. Director Lang is said to favor the laboratory taking over the job.

A request for $2,000 was made in City Council by Col. W. R. Dunlap, of the Department of Supplies, to finance a revision of activities in his department. New systems of specifications recommended by the Pittsburgh Bureau of Government Research are to be installed. The change will require the employment of a number of additional helpers to be hired by the day.

SHEET & TUBE ELECTS EATON

negotiations with Bethlehem had been conducted.

Yesterday it became known that Eaton had lost control of two large blocks of stock, a result of his being ousted from the chairmanship of Continental Shares by a group of Cleveland and New York bankers.

The belief is general that the break in Eaton's power over his network of inter-related companies has removed the principal obstacle to the completion of the merger of Sheet and Tube with Bethlehem.

Frank Purnell, president of Youngstown Sheet and Tube, addressing the stockholders declared:

"It is hoped that we have reached the bottom of the depression. We do not look for any material improvement, but believe there will be gradual upturn."

Medals to Honor Mothers Of Byrd, MacArthur

WASHINGTON, April 28.—(AP.)—Two Virginia mothers will receive recognition tonight because they reared illustrious sons.

The Daughters of 1812, in convention here, voted to award gold medals to Mrs. Elinor Bolling Flood Byrd and Mrs. Mary P. Hardy MacArthur, mothers of famed sons and members of families which have been producing heroes for generations.

Mrs. Byrd, of course, is the mother of Richard, who flew over both poles and the Atlantic Ocean. But her other two sons, Tom and Harry—have won fame too. A woman who always has stayed in the background, tonight will be the first time the spotlight and decorations have been hers.

The other mother reared Douglas MacArthur, who now is chief of the army staff. She has lived with her son since her husband, a lieutenant general in the army, died in 1912, and has seen Douglas rise from captaincy, which he held then, to the full generalship which accompanies his present position.

Mrs. MacArthur, though, is an invalid, and unable to leave her room in Gen. MacArthur's Fort Myer (Va.) home. She, therefore, designated him to receive the gold medal for her.

Coolidge Advocates U. S. Protection of Nationals

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 28.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

It will do no harm to emphasize the duty of the United States to protect its citizens in Nicaragua or any foreign country. The practical question is always how that duty can best be discharged. Those who know Col. Henry L. Stimson and his book on American policy in Nicaragua know he would not remain secretary of state if he felt he was being restrained in giving suitable protection.

Mr. Coolidge

Perhaps some of his expressions have not been happily phrased nor correctly expressed his intentions. But what he does is important. In the present season it may not be bad judgment nor dereliction of duty to ask a few people to come to the shore where they can be protected while native forces attempt to rid the interior of banditry.

We have helped Nicaragua establish a government, hold two elections and organize a military force. We want her to walk alone, not always lean on us. Her government should deal with bandits. We have not set up a protectorate but in a neighborly way tried to help Nicaragua provide her own law and order. Meantime the demand for the protection of our citizens abroad is a wholesome expression of public opinion.

U. S. MARINE DESCRIBES BATTLE

Guerilla's Chief Lieutenant Shot Down Trying Escape, Decorated Flier Reveals

CHICAGO, April 28.—(AP.)—Papers found on the body of Pedro Blandon, one of the most trusted generals of the insurgent leader, Augusto Sandino, who has disturbed the Nicaraguan government since the earthquake, may lead to the capture of the guerilla chieftain himself.

A description of the killing of the insurgent's chief aide was received here today via radio from Lieut. John S. E. Young, Marine Corps aviator who took part in the engagement and has since been recommended for the distinguished service flying cross.

Blandon was killed by two troopers of the Guardia Nacionale as he fled from cover of a shed in the hope of escaping across the railroad tracks at Logtown, Lieut. Young said.

Lieut. Young wrote the facts of this dispatch and transmitted them himself via amateur radio to Fred H. Schnell, chief of staff of the Radio and Television Institute here at the request of the Associated Press.

Lieut. Young concluded his description of the battle in which Blandon was killed with this assertion:

"Sandino is still on the east coast, but his ardor and that of his followers has been considerably cooled in the past two weeks. The protection of the east coast is now in the hands of the Guardia Nacional, but should any emergency arise the Marines and their aviation unit will be on hand to put everything well in hand."

SUITOR BLAMED IN GIRL MURDER

NEW YORK, April 28.—(INS.)—Virginia Brannen, 23-year-old dance hall hostess, was probably murdered by a jealous sweetheart, police said today.

The body of the girl who came to New York from Bangor, Me., seeking fame, was found yesterday near a lane in the Dunwoodie section of Yonkers. She had been "taken for a ride" in broad daylight, shot once under the heart and her body tossed behind a low stone wall bordering a seminary.

Police today had made no arrests in the case and were doubtful as to the exact motive, although they said they believed she had been the victim of "a quarrel." A man, known to have been her friend, was sought for questioning.

FROST TO END WINTRY BLASTS

A light frost is forecast for the Pittsburgh district tonight to bring to an end the return engagement of King Winter. Last night the mercury slumped to freezing, officially, and in outlying districts lower temperatures were reported. There was frost in spots. Whatever damage was done to trees and plants came from the low temperature, rather than from the frost, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said.

Today the mercury is expected to rise to near 50 degrees. The high pressure area, which produced the cold weather, is expected to have passed this district by tomorrow morning, after which more seasonable weather can be expected, Brotzman said.

KING'S VISIT TO CAPITAL SADDENED

Monarch Suspends Mourning To Carry Out Scheduled Program With President

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 28.—The almighty king of Siam set forth for the gaieties of Washington with a heavy heart today.

For he had received word from Paris that his half-brother, Prince Chandaburi, member of the Supreme Council of State, had died.

However, a king must fulfill his engagements of state, so his majesty has ordered a suspension of mourning.

King Prajadhipok, before leaving for his visit to President Hoover, granted his first interview in which he revealed that he was planning to grant his 11,500,000 subjects the right to vote.

TALKS LIKE AMERICAN

Despite the fact that he is one of the three remaining absolute monarchs in the world, the King looked and talked much like an American.

He was dressed in a tweed business suit and wore a sweater-vest. He said he liked to see Charlie Chaplin in the movies and wanted to see Babe Ruth play baseball.

His Majesty declared that after his operation for a cataract in his left eye he planned to see the Broadway shows, visit industrial plants in Detroit and Schenectady, N. Y., and satisfy his keen interest in American aviation, schools and mechanical inventions.

The King chatted frankly of his political philosophy and coined slogans along the conversational way in good Americanese.

KING LIKE FATHER

Here are some of the royal slogans:

"The King is like a father looking after his family."

"The combination of western and eastern ideas is very good."

"The Siamese adapt—we do not adopt."

"The aim of the government is the happiness of the greatest number of people possible."

"We tell our people to go and meditate instead of accepting everything at once."

The King, although the head of the Buddhist church in Siam, declared that he did not consider himself as having any divine right. He added:

"The duty of the King is to help his people, but the king, like the father in a patriachial family, is to be obeyed."

His majesty told of how he wishes to observe how the American people voted and if the voting really expressed the will of the majority.

He was asked if he considered a monarchy or a republic the best form of government. He said:

"That is a question for a professor of sociology. The best form of government is that which suits the people of a particular country best."

OHIO 'RED' LAW HELD INVALID

AKRON, O., April 28.—(AP.)—Holding that the Ohio criminal syndicalism measure is unconstitutional, Judge Walter B. Wanamaker today dismissed the indictment against Paul F. Kassay, 37, former Goodyear-Zeppelin mechanic, who had been scheduled to go to trial today for alleged attempts to damage the Navy dirigible Akron.

Wanamaker has had the question of constitutionality under consideration since Friday, when Assistant Prosecutor George Hargreaves filed a brief upholding the legality of the syndicalism law in answer to a demurrer filed by Mrs. Yetta Land, attorney for Kassay.

The demurrer assailed constitutionality of the measure on the grounds that it is class legislation and abridges the right of free speech, freedom of the press and freedom to effect political reform guaranteed by the Constitution.

POPE CAUTIONS FASCISTS

VATICAN CITY, April 28.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI in a letter made public has declared Fascism must "obey the church and its head" if it wishes to be truly Catholic.

Writing to Cardinal Schuster, archbishop of Milan, in direct reply to an address made by Giovanni Giuriati, secretary of the Fascist party, in Milan, the Pontiff said:

"Fascism says it is Catholic and wishes to be Catholic. Now in order to be Catholics not in name only but in deed also; in order to be true, good Catholics, not Catholics of false name and Catholics who in the great family of the church wound the heart of mother church by their manner of speaking and acting and give such a bad example as to drive others away, there is only one indispensable means—to obey the church and its head and to think with the church and its head."

BURKE ON WAY TO LIFE TERM

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 28.—(AP.)—Fred Burke, notorious gangster, sentenced to life imprisonment after he had pleaded guilty to the killing of Patrolman Charles Skelly here, December 14, 1929, was moved swiftly and under heavy guard from Berrien County Jail at 4:37 a. m. today, accompanied by two automobiles, for Marquette, where he will begin serving his sentence Wednesday.

Burke will be eligible for parole after 25 years, less time off for good behavior.

Judge Charles E. White, who sentenced Burke yesterday, charged him with second degree murder, contending the crime was committed in "hot anger," and was not premeditated.

Burke thanked Judge White after sentence was pronounced.

SEEK 'PHANTOM' AS STRANGLER

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 28.—(INS.)—Search for the suspected strangler of Louise Teuber, 17, whose indentity police would not disclose, centered today in a residential district here in which her "phantom lover" and Louise were believed to have spent the evening before the drive that ended in death.

Residents in the district were asked today by authorities to report any instance of sudden change of address or suspicious actions.

The latest clue in the hanging of the girl, whose body was found on a tree a week ago, developed after witnesses reported they had seen Louise in a car with a man on the eve of the slaying.

A woman reported she had talked to Louise shortly before she disappeared and had later seen her enter a car with two men, one of whom answers the description of the suspect now being sought.

A coroner's jury yesterday gave a verdict of "strangulation by a person or persons unknown."

BERENGUER IMPRISONED

MADRID, April 28.—(INS.)—Gen. Damaso Berenguer, premier of Spain during its last monarchical year, sat in a military prison today while the Republican government hastened arrangements for his trial.

Gen. Berenguer, charged with responsibility for the execution of Capts. Hernandez and Galan after the Jaca garrison rebellion last December, was arrested at his home and quietly escorted to the prison.

The one-time dictator, who followed Gen. Primo de Rivero as head of King Alfonso's tottering regime, will be defended by Gen. Francisco Franco, brother of Maj. Ramon Franco, of the Spanish air forces.

With advent of the republic, the nation looked back upon the Jaca rebellion with increasing conviction the uprising was the factor that inaugurated the eventual fall of the monarchy and the two leaders who faced a firing squad for their revolutionary activities are regarded now as the country's martyrs.

Mary Wants Her Films Destroyed When She Dies

LONDON, April 28.—(INS.)—When Mary Pickford dies, all her films will be destroyed and her face will disappear forever from the screen, her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, revealed upon his arrival here. He said:

"Recently, Mary added a codicil to her will providing that all her films be destroyed posthumously because her sole aim has been to bring joy to the present generation."

Fairbanks arrived here from a hunting expedition to India. He said his plans call for a probable visit to Norway and Sweden.

CUSTODY OF BABY GIVEN MOTHER

Rosalie T. Beattie's court fight for the custody of her son, Paul Edward, 14 months old, has been settled out of court and the child has been returned to his mother in Wheeling, W. Va., Common Pleas Judge Sylvester J. Snee was informed today, as he prepared to hear arguments for a writ of habeas corpus. The case was continued indefinitely.

Mrs. Beattie alleged her husband, Taylor E. Beattie, of Barnsdale street, Pittsburgh, a McKeesport business man, from whom she is separated, had abducted her child during a visit with the child last Sunday. Mrs. Beattie is the daughter of Dr. John T. Thornton, a prominent physician, of Wheeling.

NEWARK, N. J., April 28.—(INS.)—An 18-hour air mail and express service between New York and California will be the next step in air transport. That was the prediction of Walter E. Brown, postmaster general, when he took a plane here late yesterday for Washington after a New York visit.

He said if one line should open such a service, other transcontinental lines would follow.

TRUTH IN 'ADS' TERMED VITAL

Hector Fuller, publicity counsellor of New York City, told the Pittsburgh Advertising Club today that the question of truth in advertising "is really a very serious one, for it involves the honor and dignity and usefulness of our profession." The meeting was held in William Penn Hotel. Fuller spoke under the auspices of the Advertising Federation of America. He said:

"In the bad old days advertising refused to allow itself to be limited by any regard for the truth. Today, the profit in honesty is so well established that truth is rapidly becoming a passion with advertisers."

Fuller paid tribute to the newspapers for their part in the fight for truth in advertising, as follows:

"We cannot too highly give credit to the newspapers for the high stand they have taken and maintained."

Ex-Kaiser Sues to Uphold Right to Royal Title

BERLIN, April 28.—(INS.)—Determined to maintain his Imperial status at all costs, former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany has filed criminal charges against the recorder of deeds at Reichenbach for dishonoring the royal signature on a document, it was reported by the newspaper Tempo today.

The document was signed, "Wilhelm I. R.," the same form the ex-Kaiser used before the revolution when he was truly "Imperator Rex" of Germany.

In his action, according to Tempo, the ex-kaiser levels charges of "property damage" against the recorder of deeds. He claims the official penciled an exclamation point and a question mark on the margin of the document near the famous signature.

The recorder held the signature was invalid for registering deeds on the grounds the ex-kaiser's official name now is "Wilhelm, Prince of Prussia." The recorder also claimed the document made pretensions to the throne on behalf of the ex-kaiser.

Despite the recorder's objections, the general law courts accepted the imperial signature as valid.

Weather Conditions.

The skies are clear over much the greater portion of the country this morning, the only cloudiness occupies the northeast and the southwest, where low pressure areas are dominating. The precipitation was light, and was limited to snow flurries in the northern states yesterday and to showers over the southwestern states. The showery conditions extend as far east as Eastern Texas and Western Kansas. The high pressure area is centered over the Lower Mississippi Valley states and extends northwestward to Alberta. It is attended by cold weather, with frost and freezing temperature nearly everywhere from the Appalachian Mountains westward to Central Iowa and north of the Gulf states. The temperature will rise by about 15 degrees this afternoon, but will drop to between 35 and 40 degrees and light to heavy frost may be expected tonight.

River Conditions.

The rivers are about stationary. Stage at Franklin is 7.2 feet; Parkers Landing, 7.3; Lock No. 7, 15.1; Pittsburgh, 18.7; Dam No. 4, 14.5; Dam No. 6, 15.7; Dam No. 10, 13.1, and Dam No. 13, 13.5. The upper rivers will fall. The Ohio will continue to rise slowly.

PINCHOT WINS FAIR RATE BILL TEST

Ripper Is Passed on Second Reading Over Opposition Of Gen. Martin's Forces

calls were registered and other maneuvers introduced to wear down the Governor's men.

Allegheny County's delegation split over the issue—Dietrich, Gangloff, Musmanno, Spann and Stadtlander voting against the administration.

Baldridge, Grenet, Rooney and Dr. Steedle were absent, Steedle having been called home due to illness in his family.

Those who voted to pass the Governor's measures which would rip out the Public Service Commission and replace it with a new fair rate board include: Bell, Dunn, Dwyer, Goehring, Hagmaier, Lynch, Maloney, McClure, Riddle, Neely, Reed, Rhodes, Soffel, Storer, Tucker and Wettach.

Clinton Sowers, of Philadelphia, and Elwood Turner, of Delaware County, led the onslaught on the administration. Charles W. Staudenmaier, sponsor of the measures, bore the brunt of the attack.

MOORE REPORT FILED

The utility issue first reached the floor when D. Glenn Moore, chairman of the investigating committee of the House, filed the committee's preliminary report. It maintained the Public Service Commission had dissatisfied the people, and contained some recommendations that were already incorporated in the three fair rate bills.

Ellwood Turner, minority member, attacked the report, saying he refused to sign it. He pleaded that the utility industry paid a goodly sum in taxes to the state, and that its criticism and disruption meant difficulties to a large number of employes.

Bart Richards, member from New Castle, entered the debate and took issue with Turner. While Moore made a brief defense of the report.

The committee will continue tomorrow, hearing, it expects, F. R. Phillips, executive vice president of the Philadelphia Company and H. L. Mitchell, president of the West Penn Power Company, both of Pittsburgh.

FIGHT ON POLICE BILLS DELAYED

HARRISBURG, April 28.—The fight on the coal and iron police bills of the administration will be delayed until tomorrow.

Thomas Wilson, sponsor of the "protective police" measure which is the result of Gov. Pinchot's conferences, this afternoon sent the Wilson bill back into the Law and Order Committee with the intention of having it brought out again Wednesday, then to be passed and messaged to the Senate.

M. A. Musmanno, whose two coal police bills have been buried in the Senate Judiciary General Committee for nearly a month, today asked Harry Himes, chairman of the Law and Order Committee, to grant a public hearing on the Wilson bill. Himes said such a decision must rest with the committee, which meets tomorrow.

Wilson is opposing such procedure on the grounds that it is "too late" for such a hearing. He hopes the committee will have the Musmanno and Wilson bills at the same time, to act on any or none.

PYMATUNING BILL PASSES

HARRISBURG, April 28.—(AP.)—The Senate today passed finally the Stevenson bill appropriating $1,500,000 for the Pymatuning Dam project. The bill now goes to the Governor, whose approval is assured in view of his recommendation that the bill be considered as part of an emergency advance appropriation plan for the relief of unemployment.

Litzenberger Given Airways Run Here

Al Litzenberger, well known in local aviation circles, will pilot one of the Pittsburgh Airways planes on the new two-hour New York run beginning Friday, it was announced today. Public Confidence Gone, House Report Urges Abolition of P. S. C.

HARRISBURG, April 28.—(AP.)—The majority report of the House committee investigating public utilities, noted the following four "salient points" which it said have been established after a prolonged investigation:

"First—The committee finds that the Public Service Commission as it now exists has completely lost the confidence of the public it was intended to serve;

"Second—Because of this loss of confidence, the committee recommends that the present Public Service Commission be abolished immediately;

"Third—The committee recommends that the Governor be given authority by legislation to appoint and remove members of the commission;

"Fourth—The committee finds that its recommendations for the most part are embodied in House Bills 1630, 1931 and 1632, and recommends the passage of the three bills."

The bills indorsed are the three fair rate bills passed early today.

UTILITIES FAVORED

"The Public Service Commission was intended to exercise its powers to prevent utilities from charging higher rates than necessary and to safeguard the investor. The evidence already before us shows that these objects have not been secured.

"Any indifference or negligense on the part of the commission tends to operate in favor of the utilities.

"The Public Service Commission has not only failed to use the information in its possession in the matter of rates, it has failed and neglected to use its powers in protecting investors in utility securities:

"(1) It has failed to make public the issuance of securities by holding companies;

"(2) It has without protest allowed certain utilities to 'write up' their fixed assets for the purpose of increasing security issues;

"(3) It has never certified any violation of the law to the Attorney General.

"The water company situation in many sections of the Commonwealth is an outstanding illustration of inflation by holding companies without objection or publicity from the Public Service Commission.

"The commission's neglect of its function as protector of the public has thrown the burden of expense of rate cases and appeals on citizens and municipalities, with the result of discouraging them in advance.

"We believe that the commission has not disposed of some of these cases expeditiously. The decisions have usually favored the utilities.

P. S. C. ADMITS FAILURE

"The reproduction cost system of valuation has not proven satisfactory. It enables the utilities to obtain high profits. Its use by the P. S. C. of Pennsylvania has been out of line with its use by other commissions. In making valuations the evidence discloses that double weight has been assigned to it over actual cost. The utilities have been favored by this loose, uncertain guesswork.

"Members of the P. S. C. called before this committee admitted that the commission had been guilty of many errors of omission. Indifference and negligence on the part of the commission have tended to operate in favor of the utilities.

"Regulation, if it is to be made effective, must be administered by men who are not bound by their own past mistakes, and who are under no obligations of any kind to make the public suffer for the errors made in allowing mergers or security issues to pass unnoticed which have characterized the present commission.

"In view of the open record of negligence and indifference on the part of the present commission in regard to electric profits and water securities alone, it is essential that a new regulatory body be created to supersede it."

METRO CHARTER PLAN PASSED BY SENATE

Backers Now Push Fight for Greater City Bill in House; Other Measures Get O. K.

HARRISBURG, April 28.—Backers of the Greater Pittsburgh movement have transferred their activities to the House with the passage by the Senate of the proposed amendment to the Constitution to permit all of Allegheny County to be consolidated into a "City of Pittsburgh."

Without dissent the Senate last night passed the amendment, which is sponsored by Senator James J. Coyne.

Under this charter the present city would be given a new name and keep its own individuality, as would other municipalities in the county. It differs from the original metropolitan charter principally in that it requires a majority vote of the people in a majority of the communities to be adopted, whereas the former required two-thirds.

SALARY BILL PASSED

The Senate passed Representative M. A. Musmanno's bill to permit the Allegheny County judges to fix tipstaves' salaries at not more than $2,600.

The constitutional amendment of Senator Frank J. Harris, Crafton, to legalize absent voters' ballots also passed the Senate.

Harris sponsored a bill to change time of closing polls on election day from 7 to 8 p. m. He previously introduced one for 9 o'clock closing, but that was opposed by districts using paper ballots because it would require too long hours for election boards which count the votes.

Passage was given the bill of Representative Edward B. Goehring which empowers Pittsburgh and all other governments in the state to contract for life, health or accident insurance or pensions for their employes.

The Stadtlander bill was passed validating remarriages of Pennsylvanians against whom divorce decrees were entered in other states. Senator William S. Rial, Westmoreland, explained the bill does not validate Mexican or Parisian divorces, but 13 senators voted against the proposal.

A general deficiency bill, sponsored by Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, McKees Rocks, which passed the Senate, carries an item of $1,800,000 for schools from which the balance of the Pittsburgh payment, due April 1, will be paid.

AIRPORT PLANS BALKED

The Senate refused to grant authority for establishment of additional airports and emergency landing fields because the bills carried right of eminent domain which the senators opposed. Six bills sponsored by the State Aeronautics Commission were before the Senate, introduced by Senator A. J. Sordoni, Luzerne, chairman of the Senate Committee of Aeronautics.

Senator W. C. Freeman, Lebanon, led the fight against extending condemnation rights. After he opposed it, one bill to permit counties to condemn land for airports was defeated, 7 to 38.

Half a dozen senators joined Freeman in debate against a bill permitting the State Department of Property and Supplies to condemn land for emergency landing fields along established airways.

Sordoni rallied some support to this measure by saying the state wanted to establish fields for safe landings in the mountain districts, known as "Pennsylvania's graveyard of aviators," but opponents said nothing in the bill redistricts the condemnation authority to mountain land. This bill was defeated, 19 to 26.

Sordoni then sent back to committee another bill which would have permitted cities, boroughs and townships to condemn land for airports. Three other bills, amending the state aviation laws on licensure and having no mention of eminent domain rights, passed without opposition.

COYNE 'AD' BILL

Senator Coyne introduced a bill to require Pittsburgh's official advertising to appear in a Yiddish language newspaper and eliminating the present requirement that they must be printed in a German language newspaper.

More than 400 miles of city streets which the state is to maintain as parts of the state highway system after August 15, are listed in a bill introduced by Senator Coyne. The bill prohibits the state from accepting a street for construction or maintenance while contracts for improvement, made by the city, are in force.

King George Was Seriously Ill, Paper Reveals

LONDON, April 29.—(AP.)—The Evening Standard said today in its column entitled "A Londoner's Diary" that King George's recent illness was more serious than was generally known. The article said:

"Now that convalescence has been reached to the extent of dining out of his bedroom, there can be no harm in revealing that his majesty's illness was more severe than was generally supposed."

MAGEE SEES TAX BOOST

rise steadily during periods of prosperity, but do not show any recession in periods of depression.

"The consequence is that the cost curves of all corporations except governments have a low base from which to make a new start during the succeeding era of prosperity.

CARRY PEAK COSTS

"The public expenditures on the other hand, not having receded during the period of adversity, and carry the peak costs through a period of depression, begin their next rise at the top of the last rise.

"It is plainly to be seen that a community permitting such a policy to be followed by its public servants, will reach the point of financial disaster in a brief time.

"In times of prosperity the business community gives way to its enthusiasm, forgets all caution, and enters upon building expansion on a grand scale. Because of the simultaneous activity in this respect, prices of labor, commodities and material increase over the normal.

"This should be the signal for those public officers who have in their charge the construction of public works to retire from the field while the orgy is on, because most public work is not urgent, most of it being under consideration for years before being actually undertaken.

BONDED TO LIMIT

"Instead of keeping their building contribution out, however, our public officials throw it in. The consequence is that when evil times come, the municipalities are bonded close to their limit. How can they contribute much to accelerate business revival?

"The National Municipal Review in December of each year tabulates the financial items concerned in operation of all the cities of the United States above 30,000 in population. The adjusted tax rate, while not in itself wholly accurate, is something that invites attention and examination. For the first 11 cities it is listed as:

"San Francisco, 15.35 mills; Los Angeles, 17.12; St. Louis, 18.83; Chicago, 19.06; Cleveland, 20.96; Detroit, 23.14; Baltimore, 24.40; New York, 24.30; Philadelphia, 24.98; Pittsburgh, 25.71; Boston, 27.72.

NEED NEW CONCEPT

"It is proof of the superficial understanding of the public business that we fail to see that nearly all government activities are largely guided and determined by those whose private interest is affected.

"We need a new concept of who and what compose the 'public.'

"Those who constitute the beneficiaries of an appropriation whose affairs or business activity or freedom is curtailed by some regulatory law or ordinance compose a special interest. The remainder of the people are the public, but the personnel of the public is constantly changing. The persons who compose a special or selfish interest in connection with one matter are a part of the public in another . . .

"What will restore balance among the demands of the numerous fragments of the community will be a recognition of the essentially selfish nature of those demands.

"The time for such a realization probably is close at hand, due to the taxpaying limitations of the property owners. Local taxation in many places already has reached the point of confiscation."

SUGAR CLAIMS ATTENTION OF CLEVER COOKS

When Sugar Is Combined With Salt It Makes a Fine Seasoning

It is surprising how widely sugar can be used in the seasoning of food. As a matter of fact some cooks keep a mixture of sugar and salt within reach to season meat and vegetable dishes. The proportions vary, although equal parts of each will cover most needs.

Salt alone overcomes flatness in meats and vegetables. When a dash of sugar is added, the flavor is "rounded out" to a tasteful goodness. Recently a housewife discovered this secret in making a vegetable soup. When she tasted it after adding salt, there seemed to be something lacking. Finally she put in a teaspoonful of sugar. The result was delicious.

French dressings are also improved by adding sugar because it blends the salt, oil and vinegar into a smooth, zestful goodness. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

One hundred and fifty thousand school children were at work on various spring cleaning jobs today in the fifth annual "Clean Up—Paint Up—Plant Up" campaign of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. The youngsters, enrolled by the Chamber in the campaign, will continue to clean back yards and vacant lots, paint fences and plant trees and gardens every day after school and on Saturdays until May 9 in an effort to win some of the $500 in cash and trophies offered as prizes.

The city fire department, the city and county health boards, the Department of Highways and Sewers and the Department of Public Safety of Pittsburgh are co-operating in the campaign.

LEAGUE COURT ATMOSPHERE ALIEN TO U. S.

Race, Tongue and Creed Mixed in Tribunal; Kellogg Has Difficulties

This is the second of a series of four articles on the League Court, now in session at The Hague. The first described the Peace Palace where the court meets, and the tribunal's dependence on the League of Nations. Today's presents thumbnail portraits of the court justices.

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

THE HAGUE, April 28.—A stranger mixture of race, tongue and creed never met on any bench than on that of the League Court here.

It is a court foreign to the United States in language and in judicial customs, practices and training. When English is spoken in the courtroom it is a rare occasion. Most of the proceedings are in French.

Only two judges have English for their native tongue, the American, ex-Secretary of State Kellogg, and the British, Sir Cecil Hurst.

With Elihu Root, Hurst drafted the Root-Hurst formula as a substitute for the U. S. Senate reservations to the protocol by which the League hopes to entice America to join the court.

KELLOGG PUZZLED

Kellogg has a painful time, according to court attaches. He doesn't know French. He looks lost and bewildered on the bench.

While everybody in the court is supposed to understand French and English, it is a good thing the judges do not have to pass a language test. Many of them, judged on their fumbling speech, would flunk even a freshman's course in English.

For instance, the president of the court, Mineitoiro Atatoi, of Japan, a frail little man who does not reach your shoulders, replies in French when questions are slowly addressed him in English.

With his yellowish, wrinkled face, and sparse beard, Atatoi seems the typical oriental of old Japanese prints. Seated in his enormous chair, his head barely shows above the bench before him.

EXPERIENCED DIPLOMAT

The vice president, J. Gustavo Guerrero, of Salvador, sports a bristling white mustachio which is a joy to courtroom visitors. Sleek, suave, smiling, he has spent much of his life in diplomatic service, largely in old world centers, and he looks the part.

It is not a court of young, energetic men. The faces look tired, the eyes dull. Nor is it a progressive court. The majority is reactionary in thought and training.

Hurst, whom attaches call "Sir Cecil," instead of the customary "Mr. Justice," is the tallest of the lot, and as thin as a rail. He sprawls over the bench. He has the "oxford stoop," his shoulders droop and his head bobs like a cork on the ocean.

ENERGETIC FRENCHMAN

Attaches speak of Henri Fromageot, of France, as the most conscientious and hardest-working member. He arrives at his office early and locks the doors at night.

When elected, Fromageot immediately cut loose from all outside connections and moved to The Hague. Attaches say he resents the fact that others of his colleagues did not do likewise. He feels that a man who is paid to be a judge should be a judge and not a pleader for special interests on the outside.

Kellogg is less popular than Charles Evans Hughes, whom he succeeded. A colleague said:

"Kellogg, why I suppose Kellogg's all right, but he's old, you know, and seems to regard his election more as an honor than duty."

(Tomorrow's article describes the political-mindedness of the court judges.)

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, April 28.

THE RECENT DEATH of Joe Leblang was a strong blow at the staggering theatrical profession. Gifted with a keen mind and an uncanny sense of what the public wanted, he did far more for Broadway than Broadway ever did for him.

When he began his cut-rate activities, many managers accused him of ruining their business. What they couldn't see was that by cutting prices in half, Leblang was making theatergoers out of people who formerly hadn't known the meaning of the word.

All that, however, is now a thing of the past. Aside from his great ability, we Broadwayites knew him as one of the most charitable men that ever struck the big street. More than that, he had a great and forceful character.

The following letter, I think, will tell you far more about the man than I could say in several columns. I am happy to print it.

"Aside from being in the theatrical profession," writes William V. Kessler, "I happen to be a nephew of the late Joe Leblang, the theater ticket king.

"During his period of illness one of Mr. Leblang's hobbies was the solving of crossword puzzles. In the last few weeks, while confined to his bed, he spent many hours at this pastime.

"He passed away, as you know, at 6 o'clock in the morning. Several hours before, on entering his room, Mrs. Leblang found him in the midst of an extremely difficult puzzle that had been published in a newspaper. She glanced over her shoulder and shook her head.

"'Joe,' she said, 'you'll overtax yourself. Why not put the paper aside and go to sleep? Besides, from the looks of this difficult puzzle, you'll never finish it.'

"'My uncle never looked up. He was busy with his pencil. But he spoke softly.

"'Have you ever known Joe Leblang to start something that he did not finish?' he murmured.

"With that, Mrs. Leblang left him and retired. Early the next morning, she awakened from a horrible dream that he had passed away. She rushed to his room and was told by the nurse that he had just died.

"Near his bed was that newspaper. It was folded neatly. And the crossword puzzle was finished." ....

THE HEIGHT of frankness is revealed in the new advertising folder of the Hotel Paramount Grill. In telling of its floor show, the folder quotes several celebrities. Among them is Gus Edwards, who is credited with the following:

"The wonder show of Broadway. Equal to none . . ."

"SCHOOL children insist on reading your stuff," writes Joe Carter, who says he is an old-time newspaperman. "Why not learn to write simple English intelligently?"

As an old-time newspaperman, Mr. Carter, you should know the answer. The children would probably stop insisting . . .

SIR JAMES JEANS, noted English scientist, says the end of the world will arrive in a million million years. That news will come as a relief to those of us who were wondering when the newspapers would print the last Austin gag . . .

My Dear Friends:

After my attack of Flu I was thin, run-down and weak. I had a sallow complexion, my cheeks were sunk in and I was continually troubled with gas on my stomach. I felt stuffy and had lost my appetite. I had read about McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets and decided to give them a trial. At once, I began to pick up an appetite, my cheeks filled out and my complexion became healthy looking and I gained 15 pounds in six weeks and am very thankful for what McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets did for me.

Miss Alberta Rogers, Decatur, Ill.

To take on weight, grow strong and vigorous, to fill out the hollows in cheeks and neck, try McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets for 30 days. 60 Tablets—60 cents at druggists everywhere. If they don't give you wonderful help in 30 days, get your money back—you be the judge. But be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine.

"How will you have your Shredded Wheat this morning?"

"I'll have it with hot milk, my dear. It's a bit chilly out doors, and I want something to warm me up. It certainly is great the way you can serve Shredded Wheat as either a hot or cold cereal—and just as easily either way. Fickle spring can't fool us, can she? And be sure to have some Shredded Wheat yourself because it is what you need to keep strong and healthy in this kind of weather."

COST OF STREET WORK HIGH

The city's dirt street improvement program will cost $22,150.59 more than the original appropriation if a large portion of the 600 miles of unpaved roadways is to be given attention this summer, Public Works Director Edward G. Lang told Council yesterday.

From 1,000 to 1,200 men will be given work for nearly two months if Council appropriates the money, he declared.

Of the total, $11,500 will be used for truck hire to haul cinders, dirt and slag, and the remaining $10,650.59 for materials.

Later, Lang told Council, he will request for his use part of the $100,000 bond issue for unemployment relief, to be applied to street work.

CITY SEEKS NEW BIDS ON CYCLES

Preparations to readvertise for 60 police motorcycles were being made today by Col. W. R. Dunlap, city supplies director.

The representative of the Henderson Mortorcycle Company was the successful bidder, but the factory went out of business, and Dunlap told Council he hesitated to buy 'orphan' machines.

Seventy-nine old machines will be traded in and the total expenditure will be $30,000.

Dunlap also asked permission to advertise for contracts on three trucks for the Bureau of Highways and Sewers. Cost of the vehicles will be $9,125.

CARSON STREET PROJECT UP

An ordinance for the widening of Carson street from Corliss to McKees Rocks was in Council's hands today. Contract ordinances will be introduced Monday, the Department of Public Works said today.

The improvement will provide a 45-foot roadway, except for 300 feet under the Ohio Connecting Railroad, where it will be reduced to 38 feet.

The project has been approved by the City Planning Commission. Plans were made for a 54-foot roadway, but were modified because of high cost. A nine-foot sidewalk will run the full length of the street, except under the railroad tracks. Property damages are estimated at $341,127.90.

ROONEY SLAYER GETS 5 TO 15

James Soldan, 43, of the North Side, today began serving five to 15 years in the Western Penitentiary following his plea of guilty to murder in the death of former Patrolman Myles Rooney, 38, of 1307 Boyle street, last January 19. Visiting Judge J. Frank Graff, of Armstrong County, fixed the crime at second degree murder.

A jury of 10 men and two women had been selected when Soldan changed his plea to guilty. Testimony was taken to determine the degree of guilt. Witnesses said the men had been drinking together and got into an argument, which terminated in the shooting in front of Rooney's home.

Canadian, British Separation Hinted

LEEDS, England, April 28.—(AP.)—George Howard Ferguson, high commissioner for Canada, said at a luncheon here that doubts had been expressed whether Canada should be kept in the British empire. More than three-fourths of the foreign investments of Canada came from America, he asserted, and less than one-fourth from Great Britain.

GANGSTER DRAMA, NINE ACTS OF STOCK AND NEW PICTURE REVIEWED

Dark Desperate Deeds Done by Dastards 'On the Spot'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Touchstone in "As You Like It" tells William, "I will kill thee a hundred and fifty ways," and William lets him marry the girl. No doubt Edgar Wallace could tell Touchstone a few more ways to kill people, and "On the Spot," the giverderous melodrama at the Alvin, is proof if Cof. It invites another Shakespearean quote: "Who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?"

George Seibel

This is the sort of thing we need in a tame world where people die of old age and ennui. Edgar Wallace is a literary specialist—and Phlebotomy is his forte. When he goes to Chicago, Scarface Al calls him into consultation. When Burns sang about the "Scots who hae wi' Wallace bled," he omitted a lot of other nations.

Gore and gunplay will cure you of the sleeping sickness, if you keep awake long enough to go to the Alvin. It's the last week of the regular season, and it will be remembered by every connoisseur of crime. Not since the late lamented Cesare Borgia has there been such a cold-blooded artist as Tony Perrella. He begins to bump people off even before the curtain rises. Between murders he plays sacred and sentimental melodies on his built-in organ in the "ecclesiastical brothel" which is the fountain-head of Chicago's beer and champagne.

Yes, De Quincey was right—murder is a fine art, and Tony Perrella is a supreme artist.

RED-HOT MELODRAMA

Crane Wilbur plays this dastardly desperado, who has a way with the ladies, in very convincing fashion. Anna May Wong acts his Chinese moll, also known as a jane, in very sympathetic style. Glenda Farrell is the blonde siren who is picked to replace the Chinese charmer. Alan Ward is the rival gangster, with an Irish brogue corrupted by East Side associations, and plays him to the limit. John M. Kline is a square-shooting detective who finally does one thing that isn't straight—for it's the only way to bring Tony to justice.

These five people do eighteen-karat acting to make the play plausible. If they did not take it so seriously it would appear to be a wild extravaganza—an Arabian Nights satire on melodrama. But enough is known about the millions raked in by the big racketeers to make it all plausible enough, except on the esthetic side. Tony plays the organ too well—he argues too effectively—he is too smooth and too ruthless.

He even proves to the detective that he is saving the state $6,000,000 a year by bumping off other gangsters. If 400 people are killed who would have to be tried for murder, and if a murder trial cost the state $50,000, the state saves 400 times $50,000—which is more than six millions, but then there are some expenses, no doubt!

IN THE VEIN OF DUMAS

There is no proper comparison for the work of Edgar Wallace except Alexandre Dumas the elder. He has the same inexhaustible and daring imagination, and the same trick of cut-and-thrust dialogue.

Some of the irony is superb. Tony bids Angelo provide a $20,000 funeral for the gangster they have just had murdered. "It would pay us to raise our own flowers," says Angelo. "Get him a silver coffin from Philadelphia," is Tony's next order. "The last one had angels on," says Angelo; "can't get nothing to beat angels." "Get archangels," orders Tony.

Everything is done so smoothly and deftly that the excessive mortality doesn't worry anybody except Detective Kelly. The audience gasps as it is initiated into the arcana of assassination. They learn how murder can be committed instantaneously and the victim disappear like the magician's evanescent bunny.

All this Edgar Wallace learned in three days on Michigan boulevard. Maybe it was more—but such a master mind would not really need more than three days. Pittsburgh's underworld will have a whole week to take this post-graduate course.

Ledru, Bluebeard, the Old Man of the Mountain, Richard III and the other blood-thirsty monsters of history were mere pikers. Edgar Wallace has put them all on the spot. "Who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?"

Plan Parking Ban On E. Carson Street

Sixty-day trial of no-parking rules at peak hours on East Carson street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-seventh streets, has been decided upon by the Department of Public Safety. Council was told yesterday. Parking will be banned on the south side of the street from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m. and from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Next week the Pitt will take to the air in "Dirigible," which will ascend twice daily after the first flight, scheduled for Monday night. It was produced with the co-operation of the Bureau of Aeronautics, United States Navy. Jack Holt, Ralph Graves and Fay Wray are featured in this commotion picture. Or perhaps the esteemed Navy would prefer to have us call it a promotion picture.

Small Timer, squinting at the spotlight, says the man who is always knocking about town quite often is a town booster, too.

George Sharp next week moves into larger quarters and he has some hopes for increased dimes, halves and dollars, also. He takes his company, lock, stock and barrel, into the Alvin, where the first play, opening Monday, will be "The Play's the Thing," by Ferenc Molnar. In order not to be without a play, the author wrote a play within a play. On with the play!

* * *

When the anguished stage hero mourns that the light of his life has gone out it seldom occurs to him to strike another match.

Cliff Edwards will uke his famous ukulele and vocalize a new ballad in "Shipmates," Cosmopolitan picture coming Friday to the Penn screen, with Robert Montgomery as the star. The song that Cliff will harass is entitled "I'm Looking for Somebody to Care For." This picture, too, was aided by the Navy, which loaned the U. S. S. Colorado.

THE FILMS MAY MAKE MATINEE IDOL OUT OF ARLISS YET

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

George Arliss is more than an actor. He is, in himself, a motion picture. In fact, there is more expressive motion about his emoting than there is in many of the feature melodramas that come out of Hollywood. There is movement, action in every line of his face; in every muscle in his hands. He is a sympathetic switchboard that has a live current ready for every human emotion.

Such plays as "Disraeli" and "Old English," seen on both stage and screen, have won him recognition as a master craftsman. But it takes a production like "The Millionaire," now in the Warner, to land him in the hearts of that great and glorious box-office mob, the movie fans.

PLEASANT AND HUMAN

"The Millionaire" was not remade from the stage. It was made directly for the screen from an original story by Earl Derr Biggers, with dialogue by Booth Tarkington. Thus it has all the human appeal that Hollywood likes to jam into its products, plus all of the art that is Arliss. It is box-office and it is drama; not big, terrific drama, but honest-to-goodness human drama, with a very pleasant, very modern and very American flavor.

More, it is a story that could only have happened in America and a picture that could only have been made in Hollywood. But, in fairness—and we deny we're one of Bill Thompson's henchmen—we must add that England had to furnish the actor.

YOUNG ROMANCE, TOO

Mr. Arliss has the role of a wealthy automobile manufacturer, who is forced to retire on doctor's orders. Idle life bores him, so on the sly he and a young fellow buy out and operate a little gas station. Romance enters when his daughter and his gas station partner fall in love. And it all goes to make as refreshing, entertaining and wholesome exhibit as ever the movies have turned out.

David Manners, the Raleigh of "Journey's End," and Florence Arliss (the Mrs.), members of the supporting cast, give commendable support. John Adolphi directed, but even in the direction the Arliss touch may be noted.

The stage made Mr. Arliss a great artist, and, if he doesn't watch out, the screen is going to make him a matinee idol!

'Strange Interlude' Well Done in Pitt by Sharp Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

George Sharp, for the second time in a few weeks, is putting on an "important" play in the Pitt. Doing very well with it, too, as any of the large audience that witnessed the opening performance last night of Eugene O'Neill's rather appalling drama, "Strange Interlude," can truthfully testify. By "appalling" we mean the way one would expect the prospect of producing such a massive work would strike an ordinary stock company.

Quite evidently we have no ordinary stock company. It went about the work of presenting the nine acts of psychology, biology and pathology as casually as if it were the merest light and frothy comedy. Not at first, of course, but they soon got over the initial fidgets and then went at it as if there were nothing at all at which to be appalled.

ALLOWANCES NOT NEEDED

A professional playgoer must confess to twitchings of mingled emotions while waiting for the curtain to arise on a difficult drama that one knows must be compared by the only standard for this play that one knows, a Theater Guild production. Foremost is the thought that one must be prepared to make allowances. Any other attitude will be unfair. One cannot expect too much. This tolerant feeling persists for a time—until realization comes that this is unfair, too, and that the company has every right to be judged by what it is doing, without asking any favors.

This feeling comes with the realization that we are seeing a different "Strange Interlude," a "Strange Interlude" played in the minor key instead of the major, and with that realization any lingering doubt as to the merit of the production vanishes. Even for a minor-key presentation, the tempo at first last night was a little slow (which we excuse as a first performance), but after the fifth-act dinner intermission the timing of the action was much better, and we feel that nothing will be amiss in this respect during the remainder of the week.

NINA IS COMPLICATED

It is unnecessary to again review the story of the neurotic Nina Leeds, whose life is entwined with those of three men. That simple statement is enough. But we do have to consider Nina, herself. She is so complicated. Like Juliet, she is a woman that one feels no actress is sufficiently experienced to play until she is too mature to impart the illusion of youth, and Nina is a very young woman when we first make her acquaintance.

It is this youthful quality that is pre-eminent in the characterization given by Gladys George, a new member of the company, who gives a fine account of herself in her debut. She is a blonde Nina, a charming Nina, just the type one can well believe would enchant three men of entirely different natures.

HER THREE MEN

Paul McGrath, as Ned Darrell; Robert Fiske, as "dear old Charley" Marsden, and G. John Davis, as Sam Evans, are all excellent in their roles, and, with Miss George, they reach a notable height in one particular scene — Nina and her three men—a scene the dialogue of which is all in soliloquy. It is most impressive.

Alice Anne Baker, as the elder Mrs. Evans, again proves that she is really the capable actress. Edward Metcalf plays a boy of 10 with mature artistry. Fred Sullivan, as Prof. Leeds; Howard Inches, and Dorothy Lord complete a cast that is hard to find fault with in any respect.

The staging of six scenes is a big task for a stock company, but it is capably done, thanks to Arthur Marlowe, technical director. Horace Sinclair, who produced the play, must also take a well-earned bow.

Don't Be Skinny

Gain pounds of weight in few weeks with new IRONIZED YEAST—a special combination of dried brewer's yeast plus iron—or pay nothing

It seems almost unbelievable how fast new Ironized Yeast has added pounds of good firm flesh—on men and women, children and old people. Nervousness, tired feeling changed to new strength and pep; constipation, indigestion vanished.

People ask—what is the wonderful power in Ironized Yeast that has transformed sallow, lifeless, blemished complexions into fresh, smooth, lovely skin? No wonder thousands of women pour in letters praising the marvelous youthifying effects of Ironized Yeast.

Yet the answer is simple. Ironized Yeast is two tonics in one—special weight-building dried brewer's Yeast and blood-enriching, strengthening iron. The yeast is the same used in making malt and which makes malt so beneficial. It is specially cultured and concentrated to give the utmost in flesh-producing value. Double-tested for strength, purity and potency. Used by doctors and big hospitals.

To this concentrated dried brewer's Yeast is added three kinds of easily assimilated iron to quickly make rich, red blood and tone up nerves and muscles. By this special process Ironized Yeast is made more effective than yeast or iron taken separately. Contains no starches, flours or gas-forming fillers. That's why Ironized Yeast works so quickly. TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

If You're Poor Don't Make Your Child a Whiner

Is it brutal and selfish for poor people to bring babies into the world?

"A Sad but Wiser Mother" says it is. She, like Nanette, once longed for a baby all her own—longed with a hunger that would not be denied. So did her husband. They had it. And for a while, when Dad was working and they had what they wanted, they were very happy.

Then Dad got sick. Their income stopped. Their savings melted. Dad died, leaving mother to struggle alone in a world she'd lost touch with almost entirely.

Children Costly

"It is dreadful," she wails, "for children to have to do without the things they want! My little boy is already sick of life and wishes he had never been born!"

Which sounds heartrending, I'll admit. But is it poverty that is responsible for it? . . . or Mama's . . . "ars?

"Dear Miss Martin—

"I have read the letter from Nanette, who wants a baby, and, while I have never before written to you, I feel impelled to do so now. Please tell Nanette that she is taking bigger chances for sorrow, ill health, and even domestic unhappiness, when she chances having a baby, than she would take in any other game of chance that she could possibly play.

"Take it from the financial angle, which is, of course, the most cold-blooded point of view, but, nevertheless, a point that must be considered, actual statistics show that every child born costs even poor parents an average of $1,000 a year. It is true, of course, that poor people do have babies by the thousands.

"Nanette, you want a baby so you won't be lonesome while your husband is away? But how much will it mean to you when it must . . . up constantly doing without what it wants? Sure, there are lots of arguments on both sides. But—

"Suppose your husband was like mine—making a splendid salary—and we were both wild for a baby—and you had it, like we did. Well, when he was 7, his father was taken sick and, after two years of inability to work in which we spent our savings, he died, leaving us with nothing. I had been an efficient office worker . . . but was unable to get a foothold. I now hunt for work as much as I work, and we barely get by.

"My boy is doing the best he can, but he is already sick of life and its hardships. He has told me many times that he is sorry he was ever born. While it cuts me worse than a dagger in my heart to have him say it, still I cannot blame him.

"What does life hold for him? A meager education . . . then work—any kind, anywhere, at any wages! Or possibly he'll have to walk the streets looking for work, as I do, striving hard and getting nowhere.

"We have no right to bring a child into a life like that. It is not easy for grown people to endure hardships, but it is much harder for a child. If you're lonely, Nanette, why not take a child to board? Then you won't be running any chances.

"Here's hoping, at least, that you will never have to spend sleepless nights, like I have, worrying over work you cannot get, to care for the baby you want and have—but cannot support. . . .

"A Sad But Wiser Mother."

I know just how hard a row you have to hoe, sister. I've hoed it myself—and I am sorry, too, for that boy of yours. . . . But not for the reason you think. . . . No, my dear, poverty, and doing without things he wants, hard as they are, . . . are not responsible for his "wishing he had never been born."

You are responsible! Makes you mad, doesn't it? But it's the truth. No healthy youngster of 10 is going to be sick of life, unless some older person has put the idea into his head. And your letter shows plainly that you've been doing just that.

Not Doing Right Thing

You've been busy weeping over him, and telling him what a poor, abused little martyr he is. . . . Instead of teaching him pluck and pride and ambition, . . . can hold for him. What is can hold for him is up to you . . . not because of the material things you can or cannot give him . . . but because of the fire you can put in his heart. Poverty can give a youngster quick wits and resourcefulness. It can give him mettle. It can give him worlds to conquer that a rich man's child can never know . . . providing the adults he must depend on for his slant on life give him the right inspiration.

If the mother of Abraham Lincoln had wept and moaned over him, and told him how hopeless life was for poor people, would he have ever become President of the United States? Hardly.

Whiners never do great deeds. And you're teaching that boy of yours to be a whiner . . . not a sturdy little man with the big adventure of living before him.

Snap out of it! Stop taking out your peeve on the kid. You're getting a great bang out of weeping on his little shoulder, and feeding on his sympathy and commiseration. You should be ashamed of yourself! Give him a chance! Don't cripple him just because you have suffered a few hard knocks.

Many Persons Inspired by Fiction Find Facts Disappointing, Says Fay King

ON THE STAGE A DRUNK IS FUNNY AND ENTERTAINING, BUT IN REAL LIFE HE IS TIRESOME AND A BORE
DISSIPATED LADIES IN PLAYS ARE EXOTIC AND APPEALING, BUT IN REAL LIFE THEY ARE NOT SO ATTRACTIVE
WE LIKE THE HARDBOILED GANGSTER IN THE PLAY BECAUSE THE PLEASING PERSONALITY OF THE ACTOR ALSO IS FELT IN THE CHARACTER HE PORTRAYS, BUT A REAL GANGSTER IS SOMETHING ELSE AGAIN!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

We laugh at the comical antics of a stage "drunk" because we know that he is really an earnest, sober comedian who knows exactly how he is to amuse us.

In real life a drunk is always a tiresome bore, though he may never know it because it is best to humor him.

In plays and movies dissipated ladies are always pale and interesting, but alas in real life they are seldom so and at times can be unutterably common and coarse.

"Gangsters" are very popular just now with the reading and play-going public.

But a real gangster who means bad business and doesn't carry blank cartridges is very different from the actor's and author's "gangster."

Many inspired by fiction find facts disappointing.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Arriving at Farmhouse the Party Is Greeted by Boys

My disquiet over Dicky's annoyance at Philip Veritzen, which shadowed my journey to the farm had no chance to assert itself once I had reached home. We had stopped at The Larches to introduce the Brixtons and their guests to the big rambling country house and to smiling Mrs. Ticer, who acting upon a telephone message from me had fires going all over the house and told Mrs. Brixton competently that "lunch would be on the table by the time everybody's ready to eat it." During that stop Lillian had laughingly transferred herself from the Veritzen car to her own and Otto at a word from Mr. Veritzen had sent the big limousine down the road toward the country hotel which was to be his headquarters for the next week or two. Mrs. Brixton had begged Marion for lunch so that when we drove into the farmyard we were six in number—Mary, Noel, Harry, Lillian, Dicky and myself. But our number was more than doubled when from every door of the farmhouse one or two people came out to meet us.

Roderick and Junior were in the lead, hurling themselves pell-mell upon Dicky and me. Just behind them came Henry and William, a bit less vociferous but apparently no less glad to see us. From the doorway Mother Graham and Katherine smiled at us, but Katie was at my side, half laughing, half crying with the emotional welcome she gives me after any absence from home, no matter how short. Jim stumped his way around the corner of the house to take care of the luggage, only two bags that we had taken to the Catskills, but many boxes of all shapes and sizes which filled every available space in the cars, and, packed in larger boxes, were tied to the fenders and the runningboard. I not only had much of my Christmas present shopping, but decorations for the tree and the dinner table as well, and I felt that we deserved Sam Ticer's comment, when, emerging from the basement with his son, Jerry, he drawled:

"The truck drivers' union will be gittin' after you, Mrs. Graham. You're scabbin' their jobs."

He and Jerry and Katie punctuated the jest with laughter, but I saw Mother Graham's face change from smiles to frowns and caught an annoyed ring in Dicky's voice as he asked Katie when lunch would be ready.

"We're nearly starved," he added, and Katie with a giggle covered her nervousness at Mother Graham's frown. I had seen her glance apprehensively at my doughty mother-in-law after her laugh at Sam Ticer's witticism.

"You get eet shoost as fast as leetle sheep shake hees tail," she said with the smile so familiar to us. "Eet almost ready, only tings vot mus' be put on stove last meenit. I roon qveeck and feex."

She started on a trot for the kitchen door while Jim competently began to untie boxes from the fenders and Junior and Roderick jumped up and down in wild excitement.

"Are these all Christmas presents for us?" Junior demanded.

"No, indeed," I answered, stretching the truth for most of the larger boxes did contain furnishings for the playroom in the basement which was to be the grand surprise for the youngsters.

"But some of them are, aren't they?" His voice was strained with anxiety now.

"Oh, yes, quite a number of them. But, of course, you are not to look. Jim will take them all into the storeroom off the kitchen. Then I'll come in after a while and sort things out. Now tell me boys about everything since I left."

They looked at one another, and William was chosen spokesman by some signaling of their own.

"Is it true," he said, "that we have to work all the time in the basement if we stay down there with Mr. Ticer? He said we did."

I had hard work to keep my face straight, for from behind the backs of the boys Sam Ticer was making frantic and grotesque movements of his facial muscles in the patent attempt to ask me to answer William's question in the affirmative.

"Whatever Mr. Ticer says about the basement is true, William," I told him. "He is in entire charge down there and whenever you go down there you must mind him."

"Gee!" The expletive came explosively from William's throat and Henry's simultaneously and was dutifully—and ludicrously—echoed a second later by Junior and Roderick. Patently the two younger boys were copying the two older ones in every detail of language and conduct, and I worriedly wondered whether the example set by the two older Harrisons was a good one for their younger brother and my small son.

"What I said," rumbled Sam Ticer with a portentious wink at me, "was that if they didn't work good and hard all the time they was in the basement they couldn't come through the doors at all. I couldn't be bothered with nobody around; that isn't working."

"That's only fair," I said gravely. "But do you need them now, Mr. Ticer?"

He did not answer for several seconds, while the boys looked worriedly at each other, and the rest of us had hard work to keep our lips from quirking into smiles, for there had come to all of us the realization of the clever manner in which Sam Ticer, who probably never had heard of Tom Sawyer, had used the reverse tactics of that redoubtable youth to keep the four boys away from the basement, which he and Jerry were fitting up for their Christmas surprise.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Plans for a Real Birthday Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When having a birthday dinner in honor of a friend and a regular birthday cake is being served with ice cream, how should it be served?

2. Would one serve the cake on a small plate with a dessert fork, and ice cream in a sherbet with a small plate under it, or both on a small plate and a spoon and fork, or just the fork? It will be brick ice cream.

MRS. S.

1. Usually the birthday cake is festively brought in, candles lighted and looking very gay, just before the service of the ice cream. Then the birthday-ee blows out the candles, and cuts the first slices . . . often the whole of the cake, and serves it to plates that are placed at her place, or the place where the cake is placed.

2. The first is correct. The ice cream is served in an appropriate dish with a plate beneath it, and with its own ice cream spoon or teaspoon. The cake is served on a small dessert plate, with its own fork.

Correct, But Not at All Necessary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me whether a marriage announcement calls for a gift for a friend's sister whom I know just casually. I attended a shower in her honor, but she had a private wedding. Her "At Home" card was enclosed with the announcement, and I am wondering whether to send a gift, write a note of congratulations, or call in person.

MRS. T.

Since you know the bride only casually, her wedding announcement does not call for a gift. Of course, if you wish to send a gift, it is not incorrect. Plan to call on her to offer your best wishes.

When Taking a Ladies Chair

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When I am attending a banquet in which the women and men alternate at table, and we are about to sit down, which lady's chair do I draw out, the one at my left or the one at my right? READER.

The one at your right.

-:- Hints for the Household -:-

Slice a lemon with the rind into the boiler of clothes. It will make them beautifully white and take stains out of pocket handkerchiefs, underwear and table linen.

Every bit of string can be easily removed from string beans if, after thorough washing, they are plunged into boiling water for five minutes and then drained off.

For leaky vases or bric-a-brac—Take melted paraffin and pour it into the vase and let it harden over the spot where the leak occurs. It will not leak again.

Never use strongly scented flowers as a table decoration—they become "heavy" in a heated room and the diners probably would object to the odor.

And now it's time to think about your new

MARS BUS LINE BEGINS SERVICE

Motor bus service between Mars and Butler was to begin today, with six round trips scheduled. Round-trip rates, announced by David I. McCahill, president of the Harmony Short Line Motor Transportation Company, are within five cents a trip of charges on the former Mars Short Line street car, he says.

Half of the Pittsburgh-Mars buses will continue on to Butler, under the new plan.

A school bus to make two trips each school day between Mars, Gibsonia and Bakerstown will be inaugurated Wednesday.

$10,000 BALM ASKED BY WIFE

Mrs. Margaret V. Lowe, of Swissvale, asked $10,000 damages for the alienation of the affections of her husband, Edward C. Lowe, in a suit filed against Sarah Jane Reagan in Common Pleas Court. Mrs. Lowe averred her husband became acquainted with defendant August 21, 1929, and thereafter was frequently in her company, met her clandestinely and gave her large sums of money, thereby depriving Mrs. Lowe of necessities.

Mrs. Lowe averred she lived happily with her husband until April 14, 1931, when she discovered his association with the defendant. They were married in 1917.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Rest, Sleep and Diet Aid Neuralgia Remedy

Dr. Copeland

It is common to refer to certain pains as "neuralgic." This term is loosely used to include all types of pain, particularly pain about the head and jaws.

Real neuralgia is a painful affection of the nerves. It is never a pain vague in its nature, as is commonly believed. As a matter of fact, it is a distinct pain, often very severe.

This condition is commonly seen as a sort of family affliction. Frequently it is associated with other nervous disorders. It rarely affects children. Women are more likely to have it than men.

This condition is often the first sign of a weakened nervous system. Diseases causing marked emaciation and weakness, such as anemia, are often complicated by neuralgic pains.

Some persons are particularly subject to this condition. Mere exposure to cold is sufficient to bring on an attack to susceptible people.

Infected teeth, tonsils, nose and sinuses have all been given as causes of this persistent and annoying condition. Many teeth are sacrificed and many needless operations are performed in an effort to cure this pain.

The pain in neuralgia is not constant. It varies in severity from a mild ache to an intense pain. This pain may become so severe as to require immediate attention by a physician. Neuralgia, like headache, causes much suffering in active persons who are not sick enough to go to bed.

In many cases the pain is confused with rheumatism. Particularly where there is pain associated with walking or other movements, it may be called rheumatism. Of course it is entirely different.

It is generally assumed that this condition results from disease elsewhere in the body. When this is proven to be the case, it becomes necessary to remove the primary trouble. This does not justify the ruthless extraction of teeth and unnecessary operations, of course. If diseased tonsils or poor teeth are actually present they should be removed. This condition is never present if the general health is good.

Severe neuralgia is often entirely relieved by a change in climate and surroundings. Rest in the country is extremely beneficial.

Meat in excess is to be avoided, as well as salts, peppers, spices and other condiments. A strict vegetable diet is advantageous in severe types of this condition. Drinking freely of water helps a lot.

Plenty of rest, at least eight hours of sleep, fresh air and sunlight are most essential.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, April 29

According to the predominant lunar and mutual aspects this day may be notable for its social, domestic, artistic or affectional activites, with much pleasure and many interesting developments, even in those new plans or projects pertaining to these departments of life. But there is some sign of agitation or strife in current affairs, possibly in connection with correspondence or litigation. This calls for precaution and calm management.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which personal affairs, as they relate to social, domestic or romantic affiliations, will engage the energies. Plans in this connection, or new projects of kindred nature, may flourish, but there is a menace of vexation even contention and strife in current affairs, especially with regard to letters or legal matters.

A child born on this day may be socially popular and accomplished, mentally keen, but disposed to be contentious and irritable, unless restrained and led in infancy.

Is It an Honor System?

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Most important improvement in penology is substitution of windows for bars in an eastern jailhouse.

This compulsory bungalow has decided to put its collegiates on the honor system. But in order not to make the change too quickly they didn't install the full-length French window that opens freely on the lawn.

The windows are metal-framed, escape-proof casements with small panes of glass. So the boys are left seeing the world through a porthole.

So you can figure they are bars in a different shape. With less ventilation.

Why not carry out the idea thoroughly and install revolving doors? Also one-way garden paths and rail fences with detour signs?

That would be the honor system. And many of the boys would like to accept the honors in a graceful little speech made from a strategic distributing point in Mexico or the South Sea Isles.

Stone walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a coop. That was said by a poet who immediately verified it by breaking his wrist trying to batter his way through a screen door.

If concrete and steel do not constitute a coop they are fooling a lot of a poor unfortunate lads. And why make it worse by giving them pretty windows that give you a wonderful view with no method of joining it?

That's like saying, "I'll trust you as far as I can throw a bull by the tail."

Our inside man in the great outdoors tells us that one of his experts has accomplished a little preliminary calisthentics on the new windows. The results have been as prosperous as a hornet trying to sting bullet-proof glass.

If those windows don't slide up and down the boys should sue the contractor. And all this talk about the honor system means about as much as the neutrality of Belgium in an European shindig.

What the boys would appreciate more is a revolving calendar that would whirl the days around a hundred to the week.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

William Pfarr

Wilmer M. Jacoby, ardent advocate of repeal or modification of the archaic blue laws, is a first cousin of Representative Stephen C. Denning, of Philadelphia, who is pressing his own bill for liberalization of the Sunday laws in the Legislature . . . And some years ago, when Denning was the head of the old Dispatch's engraving department here, the city editor of the paper was Cousin Jacoby . . . The only private zoo in the city is owned by John Phillips, of Carrick . . . Pity poor John D. Meyer, former U. S. attorney . . . He was celebrating the fifth anniversary of his auto (64,455 miles) by driving along the Perry highway when the connecting rod broke, the motor was wrecked, and he had to hire another car . . .

Judge Frank Patterson used to be a drama critic . . . And the North Side Police Station is famous in literature because Theodore Dreiser once worked there as a reporter and told about it in "My Life" . . . The house in Aiken avenue is where Victor Herbert lived while he wrote "Kiss Me Again" . . . Things they've done: Bill Haddock was elected sheriff without a political organization; Jud Bruff, another sheriff, was a 1-to-10 shot (and no better) to beat Arch Mackrell, but he did, and Former Mayor Billie Magee, who cut the Grant street hump without a probe! . . . Ump Jimmy Hoey, the police inspector, is even more assertive when you mention Teddy Joyce's name . . . It was the ump who arrested Joyce once and tossed him into a cell with little regard for gentleness . . . The William Penn doorman has observed that guests are invariably late for dances, always early for dinners . . .

And some jokes are so bad they're good . . . Marty Oliver's latest, for instance . . . Judge Rowand stepped into Marty's elevator in the City-County Building and Marty said, "Judge, why is it a bad ballplayer resembles a judge?" . . . "I don't know, why is it a bad ballplayer resembles a judge?" the jurist asked in the best straight-man fashion . . . And Marty confessed, "They bench 'em both" . . . Judge Rowand is recovering . . .

And on the side George Dennison, of the Better Business League, is nothing less than a deputy Boy Scout commissioner . . . Jewel Ens' answer to the hat store that wanted to know whether the ball club would sue if the store used a picture of the Pirates in its advertising: "No, but my size is 10½ and I have a couple of kids" . . . Warren Brown, who wrote that series on Rockne, is finishing a book, "Life of Rockne," which is due soon . . . Note to whom it may concern: The gambling rooms are shut tight and most of the slot machines are still under cover . . . The Pittsburgh gent who has the Pennsylvania concession for the Canada lottery on the English Derby is complaining that he can't get enough tickets . . .

WILL ROGERS SAYS

WASHINGTON, April 28.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Gridiron dinner last night here in Washington, where the President was to attend and see the cleverest kidding and satires, put on by the newspapermen who know these big birds backwards. Say, do you know that I run onto those D. A. R.'s still here. They run their conventions till every member gets to speak. They have been here so long that their badges are beginning to tarnish. Times are so hard that Fort Worth, Tex., is the only town that can afford lobbyists here. Carter and his gang are after some federal aid, and he knows what it is. Had a long chat with Secretary Stimson, and he knows things about Nicaragua that none of these critics of his do.

FIFTH LOSES FORFEIT OF $15

Squirrel Hill Merchants Prosecuted Under Orders of Walsh; Complaints Made

Four Squirrel Hill merchants were fined $10 each today in East End Police Court for violating the blue laws of 1794 by keeping their stores open on Sunday.

They were: Hyman Steinberg, 38, operating a meat market at 2120 Murray avenue; Sam Herman, 45, a baker, at 2200 Murray avenue; Mrs. M. Kalson, 40, proprietor of a fruit store at 2130 Murray avenue; Harry Tisherman, 38, a baker, at 2201 Murray avenue.

Louis Steinberg, 37, proprietor of a meat market at 2127 Murray avenue, did not appear for his hearing and forfeited a $15 bond.

Police testified they raided the stores Sunday on order from Supt. of Police Walsh, who said neighbors had complained about the places keeping open.

Hyman Steinberg told Magistrate Papale that he kept his store closed on Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath, and felt he was entitled to operate on Sunday.

Patrolman Joseph Egan, on whose beat all the stores are located, said Steinberg and the others kept their stores open seven days a week. Egan also testified that Mrs. Kalson told him to "go ahead and arrest me, I've made enough already to pay my fine."

FARMERS STUDY MARKETS HERE

The Chamber of Commerce was to be host to 50 Westmoreland County farmers in Pittsburgh today to study methods of handling and selling farm produce at local markets. The trip was arranged by T. D. Harman, chairman of the Chamber's agricultural committee, as a part of an extensive program showing Western Pennsylvania farmers modern marketing conditions and to encourage their shipments of more products to the Pittsburgh markets.

The program for the day was to include trips to the Pennsylvania Railroad produce terminal, the H. J. Heinz plant, radio stations, McCann & Co.'s downtown store and the Rieck-McJunkin Dairy Company's plant. Frank N. Stoner, of Alverton, one of the visitors, was to talk on agricultural programs now under way in Westmoreland County over radio station KDKA.

80th Division Called By Foch to Take Part In Great Offensive

In yesterday's installment Marshal Foch told of the Franco-British operations on the Western Front that he directed for maintaining the offensive that the Allies had undertaken in July, 1918. He told of the suggestion of Marshal Haig that American troops be employed in an action against Cambrai, and of his reply that forthcoming events must decide how the Allied forces should be distributed. He described the retreat of the Germans before the Allied attacks during the latter part of August, 1918. In today's instalment he tells of plans for assembling a great American army and putting it into action on the Western Front.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

CHAPTER XXXI.

On August 8, 1918, the Franco-British attack was launched between the Ancre and the Aire and soon extended to the Oise. In three days the enemy was relegated for the most part to his 1914 positions. Amiens and the Paris-Amiens railway line were relieved entirely of danger.

These results being obtained, the offensive was continued by three British Armies (1st, 3rd, 4th) and three French Armies (1st, 3rd, 10th) operating simultaneously along the whole front between Arras and Soissons. After two weeks' fighting the enemy, badly shaken, fell back toward the Hindenburg line.

Now, the incessant attacks which the Germans had been obliged to meet since July 18, the serious losses which these attacks had caused them in men and material, the necessity of feeding a battle which widened out each day—perhaps also worry as to whether they ought to expose themselves any longer in a salient where they ran the risk of being attacked under unfavorable conditions — all combined to decide them to shorten their front in the north and voluntarily give up the gains they had made in April in the direction of Hazebrouck.

Between August 8 and September 4 the German supreme command withdrew its troops from the salient south of Ypres and placed them on the line of Wytschaete - Armentieres - La Bassee, abandoning important positions like Mount Kemmel and raising the heavy mortgage which for four months had weighed upon the coal basin of Bethune.

This was one of the advantages—and not the least—obtained by the Allies from a victory which, despite its extent, was still only at its beginning.

To sum up, in six weeks the enemy had lost all the gains he had made in the spring. He had lost heavily in men and material. Most important of all, he had lost the initiative of operations, he had lost his moral ascendancy.

Inevitably, material and moral confusion must reign within his ranks. All we now needed to do was to continue the execution of our program—push forward the

Four Presbyterian Women Named to Assembly

Washington Presbytery, of the Presbyterian Church, will be represented at the general assembly, here, May 28 to June 3, by Mrs. O. G. Roberts, of Washington, Pa., fourth woman commissioner to be elected to the assembly. Mrs. Roberts has been ruling elder at the Mt. Pleasant Presbyterian Church, near Washington, since October, 1930, and is literary secretary of the Washington Presbytery.

Looking forward to the general assembly, Mrs. Roberts says:

"My principal interest will be in reports on the church's missionary work. I have long been interested in this field."

Three other women have been elected to represent their presbyteries at the assembly, under a ruling removing the sex discrimination from election of ruling editors in the church, passed at the last general assembly in Cincinnati, O., in 1930. They are: Mrs. B. J. Silliman, of Greenriver, Utah; Mrs. Helen B. Logadon, of East San Gabriel, and Miss Lena L. Jennings, Loudonville, O.

Among reports to be presented to the assembly will be one recommending that the supreme judicatories of the several Presbyterian churches require their committees on organic union of the branches to arrange to hold a conference sufficiently prolonged to draft a basis of union, complete in all details, for presentation to the judicatories in 1932. The Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid, of the United Presbyterian Church, is chairman of the joint committee representing all branches.

WOMEN'S CLUBS TO SPONSOR GARDENS

Federation Takes Steps To Aid Jobless Here; City, County Co-operate

Cultivation of garden plots to relieve suffering among the unemployed this summer is to be sponsored by the State Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. John M. Phillips, of Carrick, president of the organization said today.

The various women's clubs of Allegheny County, as well as throughout the state, Mrs. Phillips said, have been asked to make a survey of their committees and find out how many needy families have ground available near their homes where they could raise foodstuff during the summer.

PROVIDE SEEDS

If these families are unable to buy seeds for their planting, Mrs. Phillips said, the club members will see that they receive them, either through purchase by the clubs or donations.

County Commissioners today were to consider the feasibility of permitting unemployed persons to occupy temporarily vacant county-owned land and cultivate it as truck gardens. Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong said yesterday:

"During my term as Mayor, we allowed the people to develop city-owned land as truck gardens, but the result was not generally satisfactory to the amateur farmers. However, as one of the Commissioners, I will co-operate in this movement to try to help the needy."

C. C. McGovern declared:

"I am 100 per cent for the experiment. I would say the county owns little land that could be cultivated, but I will ask the Board of Commissioners to have a survey made."

SURVEY ORDERED

Director of Public Works Lang said yesterday he would start an immediate survey of city-owned land to determine how much of it would be available for cultivation by jobless citizens.

PLAN MEDALLION FOR CALLAHAN

A medallion, the insignia of office, will be presented to Very Rev. J. J. Callahan Thursday afternoon in Soldiers' Memorial Hall when he is formally installed as president of Duquesne University. The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, Bishop of the Pittsburgh Diocese, and chancellor of the university, will make the installation speech and the presentation. All future presidents will wear the insignia.

The medallion is of gold and bears the coat of arms of Duquesne University in colors. The coat-of-arms combines the emblems of the Holy Ghost order and the arms of the Marquis Duquesne de Menneville, after whom the university is named.

The Duquesne arms have a black lion with red claws and tongue, on a "field" of silver. The lion holds a red book with gold edges. The "chief" portion of the shield is divided vertically into a blue and red section and bears the figure of a silver dove with a golden aureole.

FACES COURT IN SWINDLE ON LOANS

Two Firms Lose Licenses as Demand for 'Hush' Money Brings Action by State

C. D. Dorsett, 50, of West View, was to be arraigned before Alderman George A. Anderson for hearing at 2 p. m. today on a charge of extortion. He is accused of receiving money from the James A. Hasenauer, manager of the Daily Loan Service, 413 Fourth avenue, and Charles Jennings, Jr., manager of the Fulton Loan Association, 326 Fourth avenue, in return for his promise not to report alleged illegal interest rates of the firms.

Mr. Dorsett

Dorsett's arrest came when he called in a private detective, Frank E. Corwin, to aid him in collecting, according to Corwin, who gave information to county detectives leading to Dorsett's arrest.

LOAN MEN CALLED

Hasenauer and Jennings have been subpenaed to appear at the hearing today. They will be asked to tell of their dealings with Dorsett.

Arrest of Dorsett was followed yesterday by cancellation of the Fulton and Daily organizations' licenses by George H. Slain, special investigator for the State Department of Banking, on order of C. J. Orth, state bank examiner.

E. E. Lake and O. D. White are proprietors, respectively, of the Daily and Fulton organizations, Slain says.

NO INVESTIGATION

No city-wide investigation of loan firms will be made, according to District Bank Examiner J. D. Swigart. Loan companies striving to put their business on a highly ethical basis through the Pittsburgh Association of Personal Finance Companies have kept the small loan business within legal bounds, on the whole, Swigart says.

Representatives of the Personal Finance Association yesterday explained that the Fulton and Daily organizations had not been accepted to membership and were not recognized by it.

4 BOYS AWAIT ARSON HEARING

Four youths who confessed, police say, to having set fire to a barn on the Eynon estate, McNeilly road, Mt. Lebanon Township, for a thrill, today were awaiting a hearing before Justice of the Peace E. B. Bishop, of Mt. Lebanon, on a charge of arson. Their arrests were brought about by a woman who overheard them discussing the fire.

Those under arrest were: Alvin Stoker, 16, of 1232 Kelton avenue; Louis Nist, 15, of 305 Pinehurst avenue; Thomas Morton, 16, and Thomas Madden, 19, both of 1100 Mississippi avenue, Dormont. The latter is married and is the father of two children. All, with the exception of Nist, were released in $1,000 bond. Nist was released on his own recognizance. They will be arraigned Friday night.

According to Chief of Police William Kane, of Mt. Lebanon, the youths admitted having set fire to the barn to see the fire department in action. The arrests were made by Chief of Police Ralph Miller, of Dormont, and Lieut. John Swoger, of Mt. Lebanon.

COUPLE JAILED IN DEFAULT OF BOND

Man, Wife, Alleged Forgers Of Drug Prescriptions, Testify Against Physician

Dr. Isaac S. Diller, 40, with offices in the Highland Building, East Liberty, was held under $3,000 bond by the United States Commissioner pending action by a federal grand jury on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotic act.

Michael Gannos, 28, and his wife, Mrs. Betty Gannos, 27, alleged to have received from the physician illegally issued prescriptions for morphine, were committed to jail by the commissioner in default of bonds of $2,500 each, pending the grand jury investigation.

The three defendants, arrested by city detectives April 22, were turned over to the federal authorities for prosecution. Gannos and his wife were held on a complaint charging them with forging the name of Dr. Diller to prescriptions for morphine. At the time of his arrest Dr. Diller said he had been treating the couple for the drug habit.

Although admitting that she forged the physician's name to prescriptions, Mrs. Gannos said she had been receiving prescriptions almost daily for a year from Dr. Diller, paying him from $3 to $5 for each prescription. Under cross-examination by counsel for the physician she admitted having been sent to the Columbia Hospital for treatment for drugs in September of last year.

The husband also testified to having received prescriptions for morphine from the physician, many of them, he said, issued under fictitious names. There were produced in evidence before the commissioner 65 drug store prescription boxes for morphine, which had been seized in the Gannos' home in East Diamond street by city detectives, following an attempt made at a North Side drug store to pass an alleged forged prescription. According to the testimony the names of 28 "patients" were recorded among the various boxes.

COUNCIL TO ACT ON CONVENTION AID FUNDS

Will Decide if Cash Already Allotted Will be Paid Out Or Returned to Coffers

Whether money remaining in Council's 1931 convention aid fund will be distributed to organizations requesting such help or will be returned to the general city fund, rests on a conference to be held this week, President Herron declared today.

The law department has rendered an opinion declaring all such donations illegal. Two requests—one from the National Association for Advancement of Colored People and the other for the Polish War Veterans—were refused last week. Request of $100 for the United Spanish War Veterans was laid over indefinitely yesterday.

KERR TO JOIN PARLEY

Council's finance committee approved the request before the opinion was filed.

Those who will attend the parley include Controller James P. Kerr, Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt and President Herron.

Councilman Robert Alderdice presented a resolution requesting such action.

BIG SUM SPENT

Thousands of dollars have been spent in convention help by the councilmen. The most outstanding was $60,000 for Light's Golden Jubilee in October, 1929, and $10,000 for a junket of city officials down the Ohio River at the same time.

More than $6,000 was appropriated this year.

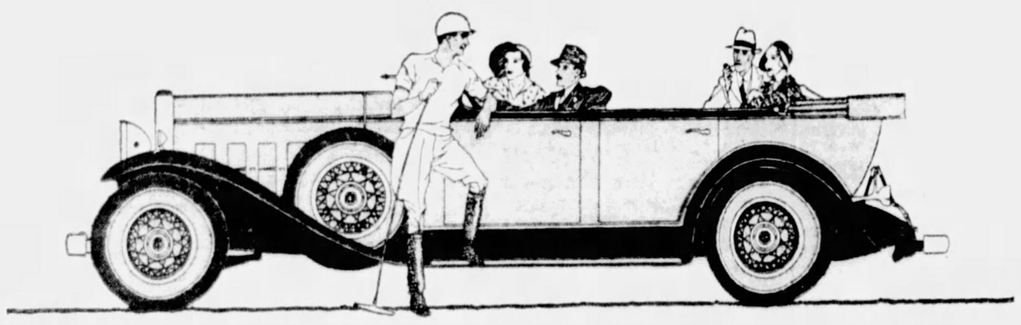
La Salle
V-8



Thousands are now driving lower-priced cars who could profit by owning LaSalle

Owners of lower-priced cars are frequently surprised to learn how easily they might own a LaSalle. The initial outlay is but little greater than they customarily make. The cost of operation will not be materially different. The service and repair costs are apt to show pronounced savings—certainly they have proved highly economical for thousands of LaSalle owners. And the enjoyment of a LaSalle can confidently be calculated to cover an unusual span of years. Quite apart, therefore, from the alluring satisfaction of LaSalle ownership, we invite you to compare this car strictly on a dollars-and-cents basis. May we give you specific cost figures?

Twelve models: $2195 and upward. 7-pass. Touring, $2345. 5-pass. Sedan, $2295. Wire wheels, fender wells, spare tires and trunk rack at slight additional cost. All prices f. o. b. Detroit. Coachwork by Fisher and Fleetwood. G. M. A. C. terms are recommended.

Many Society Set Members Among First-Nighters Seen at Theater

This changing April weather did not cause a change in the Monday night routine of the smart set, which attended the Alvin to see Anna May Wong in "On the Spot" last night. And a smartly dressed first-night audience it was, I noticed Mrs. John Jackson Bissell chatting in the foyer, wearing a gown of black velvet with a V-decolletage. And with Margaret Stewart, smart in black velvet with a wrap of black velvet and ermine, was Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, who chose black lace for her costume, with a wrap of black velvet and white fox.

Mrs. Gordon King wore a charming afternoon gown of black crepe with myriad white ruffles at the neckline and on the sleeves, extending from elbow to wrist. Wilhelmina Balken wore a charming gown of cream lace and batiste with a wrap of beige lapin. And the junior H. H. McClintics were among the folks I saw in the foyer, with Mrs. McClintic in black crepe. And I caught a glimpse of Mrs. George H. Love, regal in white satin with a wrap of plum velvet and cloth of gold.

Mrs. Harry Christian May, Jr., I think I saw in red crepe, and smoking in the foyer was Mrs. Blair Childs, in pale blue crepe, having a deep cape edged with kolinsky, and a wrap of ermine.

And in the audience were the James Francis Burkes, with Mrs. Burke in wine crepe with a wrap of black velvet. Mary Franklin Robinson chose true-navy crepe for her gown, with a black velvet wrap. And Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, chatting in the foyer, was charming in ecru lace, with a brief jacket of white chiffon velvet having a smart scarf collar. The Junior William C. Robinsons, I saw too.

Homewood Women's Club Given Slate to Be Voted on May 11

The Homewood Women's Club has been given this slate for election on May 11: For president, Mrs. Garnet E. Cooper; first, second and third vice presidents, Mrs. Elgin A. Hill, Mrs. David Alter and Mrs. W. H. Reinherr; recording and corresponding secretaries, Mrs. Harry A. Charles and Mrs. J. A. Corry; assistant to secretary, Mrs. Charles B. Painter; treasurer, Mrs. Otto Haudenshield. The ticket was presented yesterday during the business session in Homewood Carnegie Library. Also there were two exceptionally fine reports, one on the State Federation district meeting, by Mrs. George L. Carson, and the other on the county meeting, by Mrs. L. L. Hartley.

Jane Hecker, a student, spoke on the Westinghouse High School clean-up campaign and the remainder of the meeting was given over to Mrs. Frank H. Fulmer, superintendent of the local Florence Crittenton Home. Not so much by her words, but between the lines, as it were, do her hearers grasp the full meaning of Mrs. Fulmer's patience and sympathetic understanding, such understanding as is wholly devoid of sentimentality. She told yesterday of the constructive work done without state aid or endownment at the 69 Florence Crittenton Homes in the United States but especially of that one in South Aiken avenue which is under her supervision.

Here unmarried mothers, some of them as young as 13 years, and from homes of wealth as well as poverty, come for shelter and protective care, here they gather courage and learn to face the world and to pray.

There were 30,000 unmarried mothers in the United States last year, Mrs. Fulmer told her audience. This she blames largely on lack of companionship and understanding in the home. Some women, she observed, will go to great pains to understand art and literature and music, but will spend no time learning to understand young lives.

Mrs. Garnet Cooper, presiding, announced the club's luncheon at the Food Craft Shop on May 9, to which men are invited.

Mrs. Phillips Benz, radio chairman for the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, will speak under auspices of the welfare department over KDKA on Thursday. Mrs. Benz will devote most of her time to discussing the work done by the Maternity Health Center which is striking a new note on Mother's Day this year.

Mrs. Benz Speaking

From coast to coast a campaign is being waged by women's clubs, civic and health organizations, physicians, clergymen and public-spirited citizens from all walks of life to devote Mother's Day to improving maternity care for the mothers of the United States. The association emphasizes the fact that America's maternity death rate is the highest in the civilized world. The organization has reduced the death rate among the 5,000 mothers under its care to one-third the general prevailing rate.

FROCKS OF PRINTED FABRICS POPULAR FOR EVENING WEAR

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 28.—To be or not to be in print this summer is a matter of individual preference. For although we are told that printed materials are really of less consequence this year, we hear that some of the best numbers—at various leading houses are prints, especially printed chiffons for informal evening wear. Printed chiffon is such a soft summery fashion and so symbolic of coolness and a difficult-to-describe serene glamor that one cannot believe that women will deliberately and definitely deprive themselves of this fashion. Of course, last summer, and the year before, prints were cerdainly overdone and no doubt that they were almost killed by an overdose of popularity. But just the same, despite their past successes, here they are again, and even though we may not all of us break out in print, one will see many patterned chiffons, georgettes and crepes abroad this summer.

LUCILE PARAY is showing some delightful summer frocks and amongst them is the very successful informal dinner frock, shown in today's sketch. The material is printed chiffon, black and gray flowers on a yellow background, with a narrow piping of plain yellow along the decolletage. An original note is had in the sleeves, which are large circular pieces formed of flaring godets radiating from a center, much as an umbrella is constructed. These are attached on the shoulder and for a distance down the front, and back of the corsage. They then fall loosely over the arm. A flaring flounce, draped in godet-like folds at intervals, is attached to the close fitting skirt top. There is a narrow belt of the material. Surely, such an airy, fairy dress is expressed best in terms of printed chiffon.

THE COAT SKETCHED has emerged as one of the big numbers in the new Jenny collection, which has been very successful. It is of very pale, cream colored homespun, most effectively set off by a trimming of beaver, which edges the wide collar and forms a deep cuff at the elbow on the three-quarter length sleeves. A vertical heavy cording under the material passes down the front of the coat from beneath the collar and flares back at the sides to form a point at the center of the coat edge, in back. There is a narrow leather belt, but the coat is also worn without a belt if desired.

dentists,

THEMSELVES, AGREE ON THIS TYPE OF DENTIFRICE

A LEADING research institution made an investigation among 50,000 practicing dentists in order to get their opinion as to the most effective type of dentifrice. Read the following summary of the replies received:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation;

95% agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet;

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia.

Squibb Dental Cream is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia. Isn't this real assurance that its formula is correct—that it will protect your teeth and gums?

There are dozens of different tooth-pastes—with countless conflicting theories. But it is significant that dentists agree on one type of dentifrice.

Try Squibb's. Notice how beautifully it cleans. How it refreshes the mouth! Squibb's contains no grit, no astringent — nothing which might injure.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Broadway stars of comedy and song, with George Jessel as master of ceremonies, will be heard over KDKA at midnight, when they perform at a dinner honoring two great leaders of the American stage. The occasion is the anniversary dinner of the American Arbitration Association, celebrating six years of equitable relations between artists and producers. David Belasco, noted showman, and Frank Gillmore, president of Actors' Equity, are the guests of honor.

Frances Williams

George Jessel will introduce Frances Williams, stellar singer and comedienne from "The New Yorkers;" James Barton, comedy star of "Sweet and Low."

Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, has chosen two beautiful Kreisler numbers for his KDKA concert at 9.

Irene Beasley, who made thousands of friends at the last Pittsburgh Radio Show, resumes her broadcasts on WJAS at 8:45 after a brief vacation in the South.

QUESTION A DAY:

What is the name of the "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" signature song?—Elsie T., Lincoln place.

Answer—Like many other signatures it has no title. It was composed specially by Willard Robison.

Richy Craig (WJAS, 10:15) writes:

"Don't believe all these gangster stories you hear about Chicago.

"Why, after my broadcast at WBBM last week some gentleman called the studios and said: 'Say, Mr. Craig, I'd surely like to take you for a ride.' Imagine such hospitality, and me a perfect stranger!"

Speaking of Chicago, we are reminded that WLW at Cincinnati uses real guns—a machine gun, rifles and automatic pistols with real bullets—to produce the sound of gun shot. The bullets are fired into sand bags in the studio. The real thing has a startling effect on the voices of actors that never is obtained by gun shot machines, writes Edward A. Byron, production manager.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 28.—American broadcasting styles, like American jazz and American movies, have now invaded England. And that, my comrades, is news. England, believe it or not, now has an Amos 'n' Andy.

It is hard to believe. It is hard to believe that the conservative broadcasters of Savoy Hill would adopt an American radio idea even though that idea had become a household ritual on this side of the Atlantic.

In private life Britain's blackface comedians are two actors named Billy Bennett and James Carew. On the radio they are known as Alexander and Mose. Like Amos 'n' Andy they discuss the bewildering life about them. Like them they fall into and climb out of a succession of blunders. But their accents, we are told, are more cockney than Negro. That is something new in radio—a cockney Negro.

Alexander and Mose have gained enormous popularity in England, so enormous as to attract the attention of—why, of course, of course—the American broadcasters. And the American broadcasters are planning to let us hear them. John Royal, N. B. C.'s chief showman, is now making arrangements to bring their voices, accents and all, to the armchairs. It should be a radio novelty in a spring that has not had much of the novel about it.

The regular appearance of a blackface act on their schedules would indicate a new broadcasting policy on the part of British radio chiefs. For years they have confined themselves mainly to educational talks, to making the radio a mouthpiece of English culture. Can it be that entertainment is to become now a guiding force of their activities?

As the final selection in its farewell to radio last Sunday morning the Roxy Symphony Orchestra played Ravel's "Bolero." Good old "Bolero." As sure-fire now to symphony musicians as "Stars and Stripes Forever" is to a brass band. It started the Spanish music craze on the radio. And now when the craze would seem to be dying "Bolero" has only to be aired to bring the craze back to its former height.

Recently this department sent up a rocket for William Faversham. It was our humble notion that Faversham, possessor of one of the most beautiful speaking voices in the theater, would be an excellent addition to radio's army. The broadcasters finally corralled him, gave him a chance to speak a piece. Whether they will find a regular place for him, however, is not yet decided.

As yet the radio chiefs have not found room regularly for the leading players of the stage. And it is about time they did if microphone drama is to advance beyond the rather sorry thing it is at present. They have signed to their dotted lines a few musical comedy actors of renown—Julia Sanderson and Frank Moulan are the most conspicuous. But players of outstanding ability and personality, with voices trained in all kinds of parts, have yet to be called.

And they would like to be called not only because they recognize in radio a new and growing field for their talents, but because the microphone can assure them steady and substantial income.

I'm afraid the majority of them will have to wait for television. If they can hold out for a year or two longer they should be sitting on top of the amusement heap. Certainly, television ought to open new goldfields to them.

GRIMES TO FACE PIRATES

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Major Pitchers Wild. — Pirate Improvement.
Meine Blames Stitches. — Local Horse's Victory.
Hurlers Experimenting. — Pitt Flavor at Penn.

RECORD SPRING FOR BASES ON BALLS

IN CONTRAST TO the eight shutouts and six four-hit games which have been pitched already in the major leagues this spring, indicating that the pitchers are exceptionally effective for this time of year, there is another angle which appears to show that in a different direction many of them are 'way below par. Have you noticed the number of bases on balls handed out by the hurlers in the majority of games? The average has been surprisingly high. In fact it's the wildest spring the big league chuckers have known in many years.

Ed Morris

Even an unusual individual mark set last Saturday, when Ed Morris, of the Red Sox, handed 10 walks to the Yankees in less than eight innings, stood for only 24 hours, as on Sunday Vic Frasier, of the White Sox, tied it by passing 10 Tigers in seven and one-third frames. In the Giant-Philly game on Friday, which went 12 innings, 19 bases on balls were given; in the Yankee-Red Sox 10-inning tilt on Saturday 18 passes were issued, and on Sunday the White Sox and Tiger flingers topped both totals with 20 free tickets in a nine-inning bout.

AND THAT SORT of thing has been going on ever since the season opened. Take the Pirate games, for example. In the first series with the Cubs the walks totaled 11 in the opener, 10 in the second game, 14 in the third and nine in the fourth. Three games with the Reds brought 20 more, two meetings with the Cubs here last week added 22, and 14 more came in the St. Louis contests Sunday and yesterday.

That makes exactly 100 bases on balls in the Bucs' first 11 games, an average of a fraction above nine to a game. Similar wildness has been in evidence in the majority of the other contests in both leagues. Counting one tie, 83 games have been played in the two leagues to date, and there wasn't a single event in all that number in which nobody walked.

IN A CUB-CARDINAL clash 17 paraded. Bill Hallahan alone handing out nine complimentaries, and there have been a staggering number of twelves, elevens, tens, nines and eights.

The record for bases on balls in a single game, which is 30, set by the Tiger and Athletic pitchers on May 9, 1916, has not been approached, but a new mark has probably been set for the first two weeks of a season.

AS TO THE cause of the unusual wildness, Heinie Meine, Pirate flinger, believes he has the explanation. Meine, a smart, thinking pitcher, and one of the closest observers, advances the theory that it's due to the new ball. Not the ball itself, actually, but the way it is being used. Discussing the subject the other day, Heinie expressed the belief that the raised stitches have led the pitchers to try to do a lot of new things with the ball, and that this has tended to make them lose their control. One notable exception is Harry Seibold, a standout with the Braves this spring. In three full games he has given only four walks, three runs and 18 hits, he has pitched two shutouts in succession and has not been scored on in 20 consecutive innings.

Larry French

ENEMY ERRORS HELPED the Bucs to five unearned runs and their second successive victory in St. Louis yesterday, but they were playing real baseball at that, backing up Larry French without a misplay. That makes two errorless games in succession, and the pitching has improved as well as the work in other departments.

This is shown by the fact that Meine and French hurled 15 straight scoreless innings against the league champions, who had been beaten only once prior to the present series. The Pirates are getting better results on the road than at home. Thy have yet to win a game at Forbes Field but have won five out of nine abroad.

O. R. TAYLOR, 79, who died in Atlanta yesterday, was said to have been a catcher for the famous old Cincinnati Red Stockings when they toured the country undefeated in 1869, and to have caught every game bareheaded. This is not borne out by the records.

The catcher for that first professional club, which won 63 games and tied one in 1869, and won 24 more in 1870 before suffering its first defeat was Douglas Allison. The lineup did not include any player named Taylor. Asa Brainard was the pitcher, with Charles Gould at first base, Charles Sweasy at second, Fred Waterman at third, George Wright at shortstop, Andrew Leonard in left field, Harry Wright, manager and captain, in center, and Cal McVey in right.

ALBERT E. (RED) HUKLE, former assistant manager of Webster Hall, and now connected with the Phoenix Hotel in Lexington, Ky., was a spectator at the Lexington track last Friday when the horse Pittsburgher, the Kentucky Derby candidate owned by Theodore E. Mueller, of this city, scored a brilliant victory in the fifth race over a classy field. He writes The Sun-Tele describing the race: "Pittsburgher was in No. 2 position in a race of a mile and 70 yards and broke on top. At the stretch he was only a head in front of E. R. Bradley's derby horse Barometer, but finished about half a length to the good, making every pole a winning one. The track was slow, but he made the good time of 1:47 4-5. Corbett, who rode Pittsburgher, paced him well throughout and did not start to drive until the stretch was reached. Except for Barometer, there was no competition. Fator did make a nice ride on Barometer, however, after a start that found him fifth."

THE FACT THAT the Canzoneri-Berg fight in Chicago last Friday night drew only 11,780 paid admissions, is pointed out by veteran ring men as further evidence that championship standards in the lightweight class have taken a big drop. Many a nonchampionship bout in New York and elsewhere attracts a far greater number of spectators.

Time was when the lightweight championship was one of the highest of all fistic honors, and titleholders and challengers were such great fighters that a match for the title was second in interest only to a battle for the heavyweight crown.

FOR SEVERAL DECADES it was only a battler of remarkable qualities who could reach the lightweight heights—a deadly hitter, a marvel of skill, or a lion-hearted iron man, or perhaps a combination of all those qualities.

Abe Fox

But there has been a marked change in the last six years. It's a far cry from Jack McAuliffe, Kid Lavigne, Frank Erne, Joe Gans, Battling Nelson, Ad Wolgast and Benny Leonard to Jimmy Goodrich, Rocky Kansas, Sammy Mandell, Al Singer and Tony Canzoneri. The fans can't go wild over the new champions as they did over the old.

WITH ALEC FOX, Pitt captain in 1928, named as one of the eight assistants, Penn's football coaching staff has taken on an even stonger Panther flavor than when Harvey Harman was appointed head mentor. Fox is likely to give a good account of himself on whatever part of the line coaching to which he may be assigned. Though weighing only 170 pounds, he was one of the best guards in this region in his playing days, and the smartness and aggressiveness he showed at that time make him look like a coach who will succeed. It is a high tribute to Pitt football that Penn has selected former Panthers for the main part of its coaching at the most important time of its reconstruction period.

ITALIAN HEAVY OUTGENERALS JEWISH FOE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

These are tough days and nights for kings and their kingdoms, and it wasn't any different with King Levinsky, the erstwhile fish scaler, of Chicago, in his 10-round main bout against Emmett Rocco, Ellwood City Italian, at Motor Square Garden last night.

Rocco won handily over the highly-exploited Kingfish, whose sister-manager, Mrs. Lena Levy, rooted herself hoarse in vain in his behalf from a ringside seat. Only three of the 10 rounds, the third, eighth and tenth, went to Levinsky and there was only one stage in the bout when he had a chance to win and then he was too tired to take full advantage of it.

MISSES OPPORTUNITY

That big opportunity came in the eighth round, when, with Rocco messing him around the ring as in the preceding sessions, Levinsky suddenly connected with a wild right to the chin that shook the Mussolinian to his toes. As Emmett stood there with his hands down and his eyes blinking, Levinsky banged over the right again, and he repeated with two more rights, but Rocco weathered the storm by holding on during the intervals between the wallops, and Levinsky was too far spent to keep up the barrage, and the bell found Rocco coming out of the fog and fighting back.

In the tenth, Levinsky gritted his teeth and forced the attack and finished punching, but the rally, like the famous pardon, came too late to do him any good.

The King's edge in the third round was due to a bit of moving about and tossing of rights from the outfield. In all of the other sessions, the shorter but heavier Rocco outgeneraled and outmauled and outsocked the young Jewish fighter who has boxed Tommy Loughran, Tuffy Griffiths, Jimmy Slattery, Johnny Risko and other good ones.

It was a case of experience triumphing over one of those young, tough and willing hope-to-goodness-it-lands right hand punchers. Levinsky is a slow mover and hitter and somewhat muscle-bound and awkward and none too lively a thinker in the fighting pit, and during most of the battle it was no great trick for Rocco to outguess him and beat him in with a punch, spike the King's guns and pound away with abandon to the body. At other times, he made Levinsky miss his ponderous right swings and countered sharply to knock the visitor off balance.

KNOCKDOWNS MARK PRELIM

There were no knockdowns. Rocco was wrestled to the floor near the end of the fifth round and Levinsky fell down and got up fighting in the third. On the whole, the action was slow, but not exceptionally so for heavyweights. The Kingfish scaled 182 pounds and Rocco 191 at 3 p. m. Incidentally, Referee Robinson voted for a draw against the judges' finding for Rocco.

Buddy McArthur, of McKeesport, 172, and Harry Williams, Cincinnati Negro, 176, fought to a judges' decision of a draw in the eight-round semi-final. McArthur forced the fighting most of the way and finished in better shape and Williams did a lot of clinching to slow down the battle and McArthur appeared to be en-

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: POP-CORN POPPED BY RADIO—On December 4, 1930, at a luncheon of the Merchants' Association, in New York City, L. A. Hawkins and E. L. Manning, of the "House of Magic," in Schenectady, succeeded in popping corn by radio. The pop-corn kernels were placed in a transparent bag between the terminals of a high-frequency generating equipment. The terminals were glass jars containing ice cubes floating in a salt solution. The salt made the water a conductor and therefore serviceable as an electrode, and the ice cubes emphasized the fact that the equipment was cold—even though the popcorn between the two jars immediately began to give off steam and soon to pop audibly. Two minutes were required to pop all of the corn, and the bag was not burned, nor were any of the kernels charred. It is expected that this apparatus can be used to great advantage in medical circles to produce artificial fever under exact control, with no bad after-effects. GEORGE S. LYON—Over a period of 16 years, George S. Lyon won the Canadian amateur golf championship eight times—1898, 1900, 1903, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1912 and 1914.

TOMORROW: THE INVENTOR OF BOXING.

AMATEUR STARS THRILL N. Y.

NEW YORK, N. Y., April 28.—(AP.)—New York, entertaining the nation's finest amateur boxers for the first time in 26 years, proved anything but a docile host last night in the opening round of the National Amateur Athletic Union championships, sharing major honors with the Midwesterners of Chicago and the Southerners from New Orleans in the 28 bouts on the program.

MAJORITY DRAW BYES

A great percentage of the 150 entries in the annual leather jousts of the medal chasers passed into the second round through byes because of the desire of the officials to send the tourney into the second day with an equal number of matches left in all classes.

Out of the 28 classes New York returned three battlers with victories, one less than went out to the fray, while New Orleans sent out three youngsters who brought back two decisions and a knockout victory. Cleveland scored a pair of wins, Boston warriors two knockouts, and Chicago copped three decisions, St. Louis had a pair of winners as did Kansas City, Mo.

FRITZ ZIVIC BEATEN

Pittsburgh failed to place a man in the second round, its only contestant on last night's card, Fritzie Zivic, being whipped in three rounds by David Day, of Chicago, in the 126-pound class.

There are 42 matches on tonight's schedule. The matches will be cleared up to the final round tomorrow night with the crowning of the new titleholders Thursday.

"Shoeless" Benny Ahakuela, native of Hawaii, which sent a team of eight 5,000 miles to the fracas, confounded the faithful by appearing in regulation footwear after it had been solemnly promised that he would battle in his bare feet. Benny turned out to be a crack lightweight, shifty and a puncher, but he had a weird time with Irving Johnson, a timeworn soldier from Baltimore with a body heavily tatooed.

Johnson was a sort of ring clown but Benny wore him down by sighting at the graceful beauty in blue ink on Irving's chest and whaling away.

The Hawaiian socked the lady so lustily and so often on the chin that the ringsiders began to yell that Benny was no gentleman. The Hawaiian easily won the decision. Last night's summaries:

118-pound class—Joseph Baldin, Cleveland, defeated John Franks, Kansas City.

126-pound class—Adam Gaywoski, Nanticoke, Pa., knocked out Virgil Honeycutt, Ind., one round; David Day, Chicago, defeated Fritz Zivic, Pittsburgh.

135-pound class—Stanley Kranneberg, Grand Rapids defeated Ben Pierce, Pittsburg, Kan.; William Marrone, Detroit, won by technical knockout over Patrick Lewis, Baltimore, three rounds; Ben Ahakuela, Honolulu, defeated Irving Johnson, U. M'TIERNAN BACK WITH BUNTACH

The fistic firm of Buck McTiernan and Bunny Buntach is back doing business at the old stand.

McTiernan, leading local middleweight, has been giving a lot of thought for some time to making a New York, Philadelphia or Chicago connection to expand his activities. Today he signed a new contract with Buntach for a period of a year. Bunny will make contacts around the country whereby he hopes to keep Buck in circulation and to place him in the position of a leading contender for middleweight laurels.

McTiernan resumed training a week ago and will be ready for bouts again soon. He knocked out Frankie Palmo, of Cincinnati, in his last battle, at the Moose Temple, a couple of months ago.

Wrestlers Fight Move by Clinnin

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 28.—(INS.)—Alderman Albert and Edgar Cooke, Chicago, representing a number of wrestlers, will appear before Gov. Louis L. Emmerson today and launch a formal protest against the ruling of Gen. John V. Clinnin, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, that Jim Londos, claimant of the heavyweight wrestling title, must post within 10 days a forfeit for a match with Ed (Strangler) Lewis.

In advance of the conference with Gov. Emmerson, Cooke said that "Clinnin had no right to set himself up as a czar and we will demand that the Governor investigate his commission."

KEARNS IN COURT JAM

CHICAGO, April 28.—(INS.)—Jack Kearns, former manager of Jack Dempsey and now manager of Mickey Walker, middleweight champion, today was ordered by Circuit Judge Daniel Trude to show cause why he should not be held in contempt for failure to pay $5,000 to his estranged wife, Mrs. Legana Angel Kearns, former vaudeville actress. He was given five days to submit a reply.

ST. LOUIS, April 28.—"Bring on your Cardinals."

There you have the mood of our Pirates this morning on top of two whirlwind victories over the Redbirds, who have been forced to seek shelter in third place beneath Bill McKechnie's daring Braves and the Chicago Cubs.

The two triumphs achieved by the Buccos since they landed here Sunday morning are reflected in the morale of the Pittsburgh team. The Ensmen are eager for more action, two more games with the National League champs being scheduled before the Buccos hit the homeward trail.

And the Freebooters were not harassed or annoyed today when they learned they were to face Burleigh Grimes. The famous veteran of the moist fling has had it put up to him to stop the Pirate advance. But Skipper Ens and his men said they will wade into Burleigh with both feet.

WOOD, SPENCER SET

Ens is not altogether certain as to his slab selection for the third game, but he has either Charley Wood or Glenn Spencer set for the ticket. Jewel is in a sort of a quandary concerning the two young pitchers. He would like to use Wood, and at the same time he appreciates the fact that Spencer pitched a two-hit game against the Redbirds at Sportsman's Park last year, only to lose a hair-line decision.

But either Wood or Spencer should be a satisfactory nominee for the sharpshooting job. The remainder of the club is pepped up to such an extent that not even Grimes is likely to hold them entirely in check.

Larry French bowled the leaders out of first place yesterday, the Buccos landing a 5-to-3 success behind the clever twirling of the aggressive southpaw. Flint Rhem, who opposed French through most of the battle, was just about as impressive on the slab as his rival, but the Redbirds kicked in with three juicy errors in the first round and the four Pittsburgh tallies of this inning proved enough to decide the game.

FRENCH WEAKENS

French went into the ninth round with a four-run lead, but in this inning he lost his control to a certain extent and the Cardinals injected a couple of hits that

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Those Yankees sure are crippled. Babe Ruth has a bum leg and Lynn Larry is lame from his adam's apple north. Boy, that certainly was the cat's silk kimono when Larry let Lou Gehrig's homer go to waste.

Nick Altrock

Fred Merkle got shunted out of his niche in the hall of solid marble statuary and that California guy that the wrong 'r a touch- called out the welcoming committee for Lynn. It's been many a day since we made two putouts on a solid home run. They would cut me off the air like Smedley Butler if I told you what Lou Gehrig said about it.

BRAVES SET PACE IN BIG LEAGUE RACES

Associated Press.

Time might prove that the Boston Braves are playing over their heads, as the saying goes, but there is no denying the fact that Bill McKechnie's disciples are producing the finest brand of ball in either league at the present writing.

Two weeks have sailed by since opening day, and there are the Braves out in front in the National League. Generally picked to finish somewhere down in the second division, they are getting consistently great pitching, are fielding almost perfectly and hitting in the pinches. No matter what befalls them later on, they have had a fortnight of great fun.

TAKE FIRST PLACE

By shutting out the Phillies, 2 to 0, in the first of their series yesterday, the Braves put a game and a half between themselves and the third-place St. Louis Cardinals, who dropped another to Pittsburgh, 5 to 3.

Old Socks Seibold, who could do no better than break even in 32 games last season, turned in his third straight victory and his second shutout in a row, allowing the Phils four scattered hits. Not only that, but he singled in the third and scored what proved the winning run on Rabbit Maranville's single. Seibold has been scored on just three times in 27 innings against the Robins, Giants and Phillies.

Four runs off Flint Rhem in the first inning proved sufficient to give the Pirates their second straight over the champion Cardinals. Larry French went all the way and successfully choked off a two-run St. Louis rally in the ninth. With two on, he fanned Ray Blades for the final out.

GIANTS BEAT ROBINS

Johnny Vergez, rookie third sacker, supplied the chief fireworks as the New York Giants greeted their neighbors, the Robins, with an 8-to-5 thumping. Vergez cracked his second home run of the year, a double and a single. The game was over to all intents and purposes after the first inning, when the Giants scored six runs off Joe Shaute and Day.

Washington and New York, playing the day's only American League game, struggled through 12 frames before the Senators finally won, 9 to 8. It marked the Yankees' third straight reverse. Weinert, third Yankee moundsman, forced across the winning run when he cracked Sam Rice in the ribs with the bases filled. Sammy Byrd, New York outfielder, hit the only home run of the contest.

Six other teams of the junior circuit were stopped by the cold wave, as were the Cubs and Reds in the National.

Ike M'Fowler Stops DeMave in First

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 28.—(AP.)—Ike McFowler, Johnstown Negro heavyweight, made short work of Jack DeMave, of New York City, in the main go here last night. McFowler knocked out his visiting opponent in the first round. McFowler weighed in at 186½, DeMave at 187. The fight was scheduled for 10 rounds.

Walter Strapple, 135½, Windber, was awarded the decision over Eddie Guba, 137¾, Wilkinsburg, in the six-round semi-final.

Johnny Warner, 127½, Clairton, won on points from Johnny Haggerty, 128, of Pittsburgh, in a six-round preliminary.

SCHOOL TRACK STARS TO TEST RECORDS

By JESS CARVER

Track and field records set in 1929 and 1930 in Geneva College's interscholastic championships are being prepared for a heavy assault this coming Saturday as more than 1,000 contestants representing more than 50 schools compete in the third annual carnival.

The marks, many of which are nifty ones and all of which stand out as tributes to the way the school boys in this territory run and hurdle, jump, vault, spring, heave and hurl, naturally will come out on the long end of the deal, more withstanding the shock of competition than succumb to the efforts of the lads aiming at their downfall.

FIRST BIG MEET

The meet is the first big scholastic affair of the season, and is one of the three big ones on the program. Following the Geneva affair Saturday will come the annual Pitt carnival and then the W. P. I. A. L. championship event.

Records which appear likely to be under the greatest pressure Saturday include that in the 440-yard run, the present mark of 52 2-10 seconds having been set last year by Joe Stern, of Steubenville; the 4:51 8-10 mark in the mile, set by Johnny Davis, of East Palestine; the class B record for the 100-yard sprint, held jointly by Herring, of Midland, and Cutrona, of Freedom; the class B mile relay best time of 3:50 4-10, set in 1929 by Harrisville's quartet and the discus record of 121 feet 3 inches, owned by Dyson, of New Brighton, and also set in 1929.

SCOTT FETE TOMORROW

Tomorrow night, at the Edgewood Country Club, the boys will gather to further honor the state and W. P. I. A. L. basketball champions of Scott High, of North Braddock.

The squad already has been roundly cheered and acclaimed and has been presented with watches, clothes, wallets and other doo-dads. Tomorrow, the well-known inner man will be suitable taken care of as the boys are led to a figurative feed-box and their bridles taken off.

The usual after-dinner speech making has been arranged for, which is o. k., provided you are able to take your speechifying or leave it alone.

BABE MAY JOIN YANKS SUNDAY

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth is recovering rapidly from the effects of his bruised leg and should be back in uniform Sunday, when the Yankees return to their home grounds, in the opinion of his trainer, Artie McGovern.

The Babe's first day at home, in his apartment overlooking Riverside Drive, was the signal for a demonstration by photographers, newspapermen and other well-wishers, but the big slugger, on orders from Mrs. Ruth, remained mostly in seclusion.

Knockouts Feature Greensburg Bouts

GREENSBURG, April 28.—(AP.)—Eight bouts, featured by several knockouts, were on the amateur card at the Coliseum here last night under the auspices of the Drum and Bugle Corps of the American Legion. The summary:

Al Guala, 143, Greensburg, knocked out John Yex, West Newton, in the first round.

Edward Lickey, 159, Jeannette, won on a technical knockout over Wheeler Ringer, 154, Uniontown, in the first round.

Louis Carroll, 136, Jeannette, won on a technical knockout over Russell Stoner, 137, Greensburg, in the second round.

Art Tobias, 150, Greensburg, lost to Frank Sabatine, 150, Jeannette, three rounds.

Martin Pregrad, 164, West Newton, knocked out Joe Zisik, 165, Yukon, second round.

Chink Rosana, 132, Uniontown, knocked out Billy Corbin, 131, West Newton, second round.

Gerald Clemmens, 129, Braddock, defeated Patty Gray, 129, Greensburg, four rounds.

Tony Frante, 143, Jeannette, defeated Ben Wainwright, 145, Braddock, three rounds.

SPORT SHORTS

SAN FRANCISCO. — (INS.) — Leonard Backer, second baseman for the Sacramento Solons, will be unable to play for two months, it was learned here today after an X-Ray picture disclosed that his skull was fractured when hit with a pitched ball.

CHICAGO.—(AP.)—Dates for trials for places on the 1932 American Olympic track and field squad, will be decided at a meeting of the American Olympic Committee in Chicago, May 16. It is virtually certain that the trials will be held in Chicago, but setting the dates has been delayed.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va.—(AP.)—Raymond Omer Lyons, of Point Marion, Pa., has been named captain of the 1931-32 West Virginia University ride team. He succeeds M. L. Hanuel, of Charleston.

BUCKHANNON, W. Va.—(AP.)—Margaret H. Hinkle, administratix for the estate of Melville Marshall, former Wesleyan College sophomore, who died in April, 1930, after he was struck by a discus on the athletic field of the college here, yesterday rested her suit for $10,000 damages against the college. Following that court adjourned.

ATLANTA, Ga.—(AP.)—O. R. Taylor, who said he was a catcher on Cincinnati's first baseball team in 1869, died suddenly yesterday. He was 79 years of age and had lived here many years. Taylor said the Cincinnati team of 1869 toured the United States without a defeat. He claimed he caught every game barehanded.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md.—(AP.)—Equipoise, early favorite for the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, has been pronounced completely recovered from the ailment blamed for his startling defeat Saturday.

NEW YORK.—Ralph Greenleaf, Onoforio Lauri and Andrew Ponzi are deadlocked in the all-star pocket billiard tournament, each showing three victories and one defeat.

CITY LEAGUE GAMES TODAY

Westinghouse at Schenley.
Allderdice at Peabody.
Section II
Allegheny at Oliver.
South Hills at Carrick.
Langley at Vocational.
JUNIOR LEAGUE.
Washington at Latimer.
Liberty at Gladstone.
Baxter at Herron Hill.

The sectional leaders in the City League face more or less formidable tests as they go to bat in today's scholastic baseball program. A full card is on tap, senior, junior and W. P. I. A. L. nines being busy.

Westinghouse, out in front in Section I, and unbeaten in four starts, takes on Schenley on the Bellefielders' diamond in the feature game of the day. Last week, Schenley dropped a 11-inning decision to Peabody, but the team is stronger than it has appeared in its two games to date, and with Earl Stratton in form and on the slab this afternoon, may be able to upset the Silver Lakers. In that event, a victory for Peabody over Allderdice in the remaining Section I game will enable the East Enders to pull up to within half a game of the Brushton entry.

MAY CUT TIES

The four-way tie for second place in Section II will not exist after today's games, although it will be impossible to erase the deadlock entirely. Oliver, in first place, and like Westinghouse, undefeated, meets Allegheny. South Hills and Carrick tussle at Carrick, the winner figuring to gain a tie for second place with Langley, favored to defeat lowly Vocational. Although not exactly a setup, Allegheny is not considered strong enough to have better than a 7-to-10 chance of beating Oliver's strong nine.

In the junior division, Washington meets Latimer; Liberty tackles Gladstone and Baxter plays at Herron Hill.

A half dozen games, in five sections, comprise the W. P. I. A. L. card. In Section I, McKees Rocks plays Dormont and Mt. Lebanon takes on Crafton. McKees Rocks, along with Beaver and Scott, is one of the favorites to annex the league title, now held by the North Braddock entry.

SCOTT MEETS EDGEWOOD

In Section II, Mt. Pleasant engages Finley Vocational. Section III finds Monaca at Beaver and in Section IV, Scott faces a test in Edgewood. McKeesport and Rankin tangle in Section V.

In an independent struggle, Wilkinsburg invades the Shady Side Academy diamond for a fracas with the Academy nine.

Limit Bouts Mark Aliquippa Show

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., April 28.—All but one of the eight bouts on the amateur boxing show card here last night went the limit. Jimmy Gilligan, of the Weirton A. C., won by a technical knockout over Leonard Close, of Coraopolis, in the second round. The summary:

105-pound class—Jimmy Gilligan, Weirton A. C., defeated Leonard Close, Coraopolis Y., by a technical kayo in the second round.

125-pound class—Nick Zallreno, Aliquippa, defeated John Cook, Coraopolis, in three rounds. Brother Wer, Steubenville, O., defeated Al Harge, Aliquippa, in three rounds.

130-pound class—Gen. Burr, Aliquippa, defeated Fred Green, Weirton A. C., in three rounds; Weedie Wise, Toronto, O., won on a foul from Davey Hart, Aliquippa, in the third round.

175-pound class—Tony Palumbo, Toronto, defeated George Bedock, Weirton A. C., in three rounds.

COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE LINKS MOVE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

A merger between the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association and the local Golf Service Bureau is a possibility that cropped up today when it was learned that a committee, including J. Bernd Rose and George A. Ormiston, of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association; James E. MacCloskey and Edward E. McCoy, of the Service Bureau, and James A. Fownes and Greer McIlvain, of the Pennsylvania Golf Association, was investigating the possibilities for such a move.

If the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association decides to merge with the Golf Service Bureau, it means that every club affiliated under the W. P. G. A. banner will have to go along with the Service Bureau, of which 31 clubs are affiliated. Inasmuch as the Massachusetts and Metropolitan Golf Associations merged with their golf bureaus, it is not unlikely that the district body will do likewise. It will not happen until next year, however, for the committee has been given a year to look over the situation.

OFFICERS RE-ELECTED

Last night, the officers of the Tri-State Professional Golfers' Association were re-elected. At the annual meeting, held in the Keystone Athletic Club, Fred Brand, Sr., of Allegheny, was re-elected president; Charley Manning, of Shannopin, first vice president; Jim Devlin, of Nemacolin, was named second vice president, and Dave McKay, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, was renamed secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected included Perry Del Vecchio, of Greensburg; George Underwood, of Alcoma, and Walter Loeffler, South Hills. The golf committee includes Vince Eldred, Highland; Jim Devlin and Emil Loeffler, of Oakmont.

PLAN TOURNEY JUNE 15

The first tournament will be held at the Greensburg Country Club on June 15.

Pro golfers present were almost unanimous in their opinion that the slow motion P. G. A. pictures screened of Miss Joyce Wethered, Harry Vardon and Bobby Jones proved beyond doubt that the current critical comment was without foundation. They seemed to think that Joyce Wethered had the most perfect swing, and that otherwise, Wethered, Vardon and Jones struck the ball according to Hoyle—or as has been instructed in these parts by a majority of golfers for a number of years.

The second match of the Inter-scholastic Golf Conference campaign will be played this afternoon at Shady Side Academy, with Langley High School's links team meeting the Academy entry.

Last week, Shady Side and Taylor Allderdice inaugurated play, with Shady Side turning in a decisive victory.

PIMLICO MUTUELS

PIMLICO, Md., April 28.—(Special.)—The mutuels on the seven races at the Pimlico race track yesterday paid a total of $397.60.

POLO FINALE SATURDAY

The final game of the indoor polo season will be played next Saturday night in the Hunt armory when the 308th Cavalry team meets the Mill Creek Polo Club, of Youngstown, O.

SHARKEY, PRIMO GO CARDED

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP.)—With Jack Sharkey and Primo Carnero at the festive board in the same room where Gene Tunney formally retired from the ring, Jimmy Johnston yesterday announced the signing of the two heavyweights for a 15-round world championship match at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, June 10.

Although the match still lacks the sanction of the New York State Athletic Commission, which withdrew title recognition from Max Schmeling for his failure to give Sharkey a return engagement, this matter probably will be attended to today.

BALL APPEALS BENNETT CASE

CHICAGO, April 28.—(AP.)—It appears that the Kenesaw Mountain Landis-Fred Bennett case is not quite finished after all.

Federal Judge Walter Lindley last week ruled that Landis, dictator of baseball affairs, had not exceeded his authority in ordering that the St. Louis Browns and Milwaukee club relinquish their claims to Bennett, who did a lot of traveling from one Brown farm to another. The decision was handed down on an injunction obtained by the Milwaukee club to prevent Landis from interfering with movement of the player.

Phil De C. Ball, owner of the Browns, has ordered his attorney, Sol W. Swartz, to file an appeal. Bennett originally was the property of the St. Louis club, and after Landis' stand was upheld, signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

TENNIS STAR 'CUTS' ERIE MATCH

ERIE, April 28.—(AP.)—"Big Bill" Tilden, ace of the tennis courts, was scheduled to play an exhibition match here last night with Karel Kozeluh, European professional champion of the net game, in what was billed as "the greatest sport attraction ever brought to this section of Pennsylvania."

Not scheduled was Tilden's remark when he saw the courts in the auditorium here; not scheduled was his leaving of town before the matches, and also not scheduled was a suit for $2,500 damages brought against him today as a result of the other unscheduled events.

When Tilden inspected the courts yesterday afternoon, he remarked that they were too small and that he would not play on them, despite the fact that a contract had been signed for the games by his manager, Jack Curly. Jack Barry, local promoter, who arranged the matches, was forced to call off the exhibition, return tickets, and turn many away at the doors of the auditorium.

Promptly he filed a suit against Tilden for breach of contract. Paraphernalia of the Tilden entourage was seized by the sheriff pending the outcome of the $2,500 suit for damages.

Tilden left town shortly after he inspected the courts. So did Kozeluh when he heard of Tilden's decision.

SICKLES GETS CAPTAIN JOB

By TOM BIRKS

The naming of Harry (Big Six) Sickles as captain of the Keenie's Garage team, of Monongahela, certainly boosts the stock of the upriver team in the race for pennant honors in the Monongahela Valley League.

Sickles is one of the outstanding athletes of the Monongahela Valley. He is a leading soccer star of the district and is equally at home on the diamond.

There is every reason to feel that Manager Al Tosti, of the Garagemen, has lined up a classy crowd of sandlotters to fight it out for the upriver flag. Many new faces will be seen in the preseason workouts at Yankee Field during the coming week.

Among the newcomers to wear the spangles of the Keenies is Charley Cole, a righthander, formerly with the Charleroi Governors in the Middle Atlantic League.

Much is expected of Cole when the race begins. Fred McMahon, last year's captain, has signed to play with Van Vooris in the same loop, and Sickles, who is very popular, should make an ideal successor.

Monongahela opens its season at New Eagle against Joe Montana's Indians. The fur is sure to fly when these old rivals clash.

Bunts

The Crafton Community baseball nine wants to book games with the leading semi-pro teams in the tri-state district. Players from the Crafton-Ingram Church League will make up the team. Twilight, Saturday and Sunday games abroad are wanted. For game write Harry Lennox, 11 Fountain avenue, Crafton, Pa.

The Booth Chevrolets, of McKeesport, formerly known as the McKeesport Sterlings, would like to book games with the leading teams in the tri-state district. The Tube City team has been greatly strengthened by the acquisition of Stevens, formerly with the Studebaker Club, Borelli, former Edgewood player, and Birchell, of Johnstown.

Managers wishing to book this attraction should get in touch with Manager M. E. Hanko, 2321 Highland avenue, McKeesport.

Because the Homestead Grays will be unable to return in time from Bloomington, Ill., where they are scheduled for games today and tomorrow, the contest between the Grays and the North Side Civics, scheduled for Thursday, has been canceled.

brought a bad mess. The tying run was on second with two out with dangerous Ray Blades at bat, but French, aided by the smart catching of Eddie Phillips, fanned Blades in the big clinch.

Larry pitched six rounds of runless ball, the Cards making a tally in the seventh on two hits and a force play. Rightfielder Watkins was due to bat at the start of the ninth, but Sergt. Street pulled this southpaw hitter in favor of Joel Hunt, late of the Houston farm. Hunt had a terrible time trying to find Larry's screw ball and he eventually went back to the dugout after missing a third strike.

Charley Gelbert knew his stuff at the plate and proved his case by hitting a double to right. Pepper Martin sent a long fly to Comorosky for the second out and the scene was serene so far as the Buccos were concerned. At this juncture, Larry made a wild pitch and Gelbert moved along to third. A moment later Jim Wilson cantered to first on a pass and there was some confusion in the Pittsburgh bullpen.

WALKS COSTLY

Jim Collins, Rochester grad, batted for Jim Lindsey and French walked Collins to fill the bases. Eddie Delker, substitute infielder, who had been ushered into third-base play, came up to do or die for dear old Rutgers.

Delker dropped a little fly in short center. Lloyd Waner played the ball poorly, letting it get away for a double. Two runs went over and two more Redbirds fluttered to third and second. French then fanned Blades.

Sparky Adams was injured in the first round, the former Bucco hurting one of his legs as he tried to block a wide throw from Martin. Adams tried to continue, but he was not allowed to go to the plate when the Redbirds went to hit in the first. Andy High replaced him.

L. Waner opened the game with a mean smash to short which Gelbert fumbled. Grantham flied out, but Brother Paul walked and Traynor shot a single to center. L. Waner decided to stop at third, but his brother sprinted down from second and Lloyd was in a quandary. Martin's throw to Adams was a bad one and Lloyd tallied, Paul reaching third on the misplay.

Comorosky greeted Rhem with a hot single to left, scoring the second Waner, and Capt. Pie also sank his spikes in the home dish when Blades fumbled the ball. The Polish Flier pulled up at third and he romped over on a scratch double by Suhr.

Rooter Toots Fish Horn for Levinsky

A waggish fan at Motor Square Garden did his best to make King Levinsky, former fish scaler, of Chicago, feel at home during his main bout with Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, last night. He brought along a fish horn and tooted it at intervals throughout the bout but it failed to help the Levinsky cause.

BENEFIT BOUTS AT GARDEN

An all-star amateur boxing show is scheduled for Motor Square Garden tonight, under the auspices of the Fourth Ward Relief Committee, for the benefit of the unemployed of the ward. The card follows:

112 pounds, Frank Schrider vs. Bob Lyn; 118 pounds, Johnny Shepler vs. John Giannatti; 126 pounds, Johnny Ungerman vs. Louis Leon and Burke Veley vs. Joe Chemes; 135 pounds, Johnny Hazel vs. George Guba and Don Asto vs. George Julius; 140 pounds, Dick Pritchard vs. Slip Lehr; 147 pounds, Pat Leavey vs. Frank Harp, Anson Greeves vs. Joe Ferraro and Steve Stefek vs. Bob Rupple, and, 160 pounds, Chuck Mullins vs. Frank Kladdick, Walt Scislawski vs. Al Zack and Moon Higgins vs. George Luppinacci.

Between Rounds

Harry Fine, local lightweight, boxes Morrie Sherman, of Detroit, in a 10-round bout at Mt. Clemens, Mich., tonight. Jack Traces, local Negro middleweight, meets Jimmy Guthrie in a windup at East Liverpool, O., with Frankie Porto, of Glassport, boxing Kenny Davis in the semi-final and Jack Kelly and Tommy Murphy in a preliminary. Benny Touchstone and Walter Pickard clash at Indianapolis. Leo Dazzo meets Mike Sarko and Red Affinato engages Eddie Shapiro in the semi-final and Allie Zack battles Jimmy Murphy and Tony Fernandez is in with Danny London in Brooklyn. Armand Emanuel boxes Bud Doyle at San Jose, Cal., and Judy Zuniga and Speedy Dado clash at Los Angeles.

Joe Dubranski, of McKeesport, has a new light-heavyweight, Alvin "Bull" Turner, an amateur, ready to turn pro. He also has Teddy Welch and Georgie Tomosky primed for battles. Welch now is fighting as a 142-pounder.

Dick Shikat, who meets Jim Clinstock in the main bout of the wrestling show at Motor Square Garden tomorrow night, gave the finest exhibition of any of the grapplers on the initial card in the same ring two weeks ago. Wrestling in his bare feet, he proved a scientific performer and won handily. Wladek Zbyszko meets Tony Felice, of Italy, in another finish match tomorrow, while Jim McMillen returns for a 45-minute time limit battle with Don Delaun. Two 30-minute preliminaries complete the card.

Willie Davies, of Charleroi, boxes Art Giroux, Canadian flyweight star, in a 10-round bout at Montreal Wednesday night of next week. It will be their second meeting, Davies having won a six-rounder at Toronto about two years ago.

ROCCO BEATS LEVINSKY

titled to the award by a slight margin. Referee Joe Keally voted for him, but his verdict did not count.

The two six-round preliminaries were featured by the fact that boxers who were floored twice and on the verge of a knockout in each came on to win. In the second bout, Lloyd Clements, of Swissvale, 170, was floored for counts of eight and nine in the third round by the hard-crossing Russell Powers, of Youngstown, 163, but rallied to come back and hand the latter a drubbing and win the unanimous decision. Carl Montebano, of Braddock, 160¼, won the nod over Anson Green, Negro, of Homestead, 154½, after being floored for counts of two in the third and fourth rounds. He also sagged badly at the final bell, but, in between his bad spells of the brawl, he managed to pile up a winning margin of points.

FREEMAN ON HAND

Frank Ferris and L. K. Meininger were the judges and Red Robinson refereed the final and second bouts and Joe Keally the other two. Harry Klaas did the announcing and the timers were A. C. Couch and Norman Borland.

Tommy Freeman, recently-dethroned welterweight champion, was a spectator, but was not introduced from the ring. James (Red) Mason, veteran manager, just returned from Chicago for a short stay, also was on hand.

Lew Massey Wins Over Harry Blitman

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—(AP.)—Lew Massey, Philadelphia Italian, won the decision over Harry Blitman, hard-hitting southpaw now fighting out of New York, in the 10-round main event at the Arena last night. Massey weighed 130, Blitman 134. A capacity crowd of approximately 10,000 saw the bout.

Blitman, former Philadelphian, won from Massey here nine weeks ago, but prior to that encounter Massey had knocked him out. Last night the judges voted for Massey and the referee cast his ballot for Blitman. There were no knockdowns.

80th Division Given Part in Great Drive On Orders of Foch

disengagement of the Paris-Avricourt railway line in the vicinity of Commercy by using the American army, just as we had cleared the Paris-Chalons lines by using the French and British armies.

In short, the time had come to extend further eastward the scope of the general operations in which we were engaged, and bring into the battle as soon as possible the army which had been the last to enter the struggle—that of the United States—as had been provided for in the memorandum of July 24.

Moreover, in view of the retrograde movements of the enemy, giving evidence as they did of exhaustion and lack of reserves, I called the attention of Field Marshal Haig and of Lieut. Gen. Gillain to the fact that the situation in the north offered favorable opportunities for exploitation.

"What particularly strikes me," I wrote, on September 2, "is that it might be possible to undertake an operation by the Belgian Army and the British 2nd Army which could at small cost seize the heights of Clerken, the forest of Houthulst, the Passchendale ridge, the heights of Cheluwelt and Zandworde, and Comines.

"Besides the immediate advantages which such an action would bring to our present offensive by the unexpected extension of our front of attack in the north of the Lys, the attainment of the objectives mentioned would give an excellent base of departure for subsequent operations toward Roulers and Courtrai."

Yankee Aid Important

In asking the commander-in-chief of the British Army and the chief of staff of the Belgian Army to make immediate study of these projects, I was furthering the preparation of the general offensive which I now had in view for the Allied armies—an offensive made possible by the success of all the partial operations carried out since July 18—the finishing touch to which was to be furnished by the American 1st Army in the Saint-Mihiel salient.

As already noted, the memorandum of July 24 included a plan for an American attack in the Woevre region.

With this in view, it had been decided on July 22 to form, in addition to the American First Army on the Marne, an American Second Army, which, as the troops composing it arrived, was to take possession of the sector from Nomeny to the region north of Saint-Mihiel.

The possiblity of creating these two grand units by the end of July, 1918, showed clearly the importance which American assistance was assuming along the French front; it was proof also of the ardent desire of American soldiers, so often expressed by Gen. Pershing, to have the American Expeditionary Forces united as soon as possible under his orders, enjoy an autonomy similar to that of the other Allied armies and see the Stars and Stripes waving over a battle-field at the earliest possible moment.

Approved Unification

I was convinced more than anybody else of the necessity of forming as quickly as possible a great American Army under the orders of its commander, since I knew perfectly well that no soldiers of a national army fight as well as under the orders of the officers their country has given them—who speak the same tongue, fight for the same cause, have the same sort of ideas, and act in a manner familiar to the men under them.

I greatly desired to satisfy Gen. Pershing's wishes with the least possible delay. But it would have been unfortunate at the end of July to stop or slow down, for that reason, operations so successfully begun and then being continued in the Tardenois country, and in which divisions of the American 1st Army were participating.

It was also necessary to consider the possibility of unforseen emergencies arising, which might necessitate engaging American troops under some command other than that of their own general-in-chief. That is what I wrote Gen. Pershing on July 28.

So well did he seize the meaning of my letter in its application to the French front that, on July 29, he related me his worries in connection with the sending of American reinforcements to Italy; he asked me to stick to my opinion in the matter (of which he was fully cognizant), viz.:

"That it was necessary to concentrate our military effort on the Western Front, and impossible to deflect to some other territory any part whatsoever of the American forces."

Form American Army

It was to this same effect that I answered our minister of war (Clemenceau) when, shortly afterwards, he transmitted to me a message from Mr. Noulens (French ambassador to Russia) suggesting that American reinforcements be sent to the Allied contingents operating in Northern Russia.

I declined to see the necessity of increasing these forces beyond the total fixed by the French War Board, and I added that, in any case, no troops should be taken from the French front.

At this moment, I was pushing forward as rapidly as possible the preliminaries for the Woevre attack; with this object, I asked Gen. Petain, on August 4, at my headquarters at Bombon, to finish these preparations by the end of the month, and I urged Gen. Pershing to speed up the formation of the American Army of the Woevre.

On August 9, in view of the magnificent development of the operations on the Somme, it seemed advisable to make the Woevre attack as soon as possible.

Therefore, to gain time, it was decided, at a meeting at Sarcus between Gen. Petain, Gen. Pershing and myself, to form the American 1st Army in the region instead of the Aisne territory, as had been previously contemplated, since the front along the Aisne was now stabilized. For the time being, as will be noted, we were confining ourselves to the formation of only one American Army.

On August 17 Gen. Pershing received my general instructions for the projected attack. After reminding him of its purpose—the disengaging of the Paris-Avricourt railway line by the reduction of the Saint-Mihiel salient—they described for him the objectives to be obtained, viz: the line running roughly through Bouxieres-sous-Froidmont (four miles northeast of Pont-a-Mousson)—Marsla-Tour, Parfondrupt, Bezonvaux.

80th Transferred

They also indicated the general procedure of the action, which was to consist of three attacks: one on the east of the Saint-Mihiel salient, starting from the Lesmesnils-Seicheprey front moving in a northerly direction.

The second on the north of the salient, starting from the intrenched front of Calonne-Haudimont, and moving in an easterly direction. The third, flanking the second on the left and starting from the front Chatillon-sous-les-cotes-Bezonvaux.

A total of 18 or 19 divisions would be necessary.

If the objectives thus defined were attained, the result would be to clear far more thoroughly than was essential the railway from Paris to Avricourt.

These operations in the Woevre would, moreover, bring other results than the one immediately sought; such as hitting the enemy as hard a blow as possible, obtaining the maximum benefits to be expected from a capital operation, conquering an advantageous base of departure for subsequent offensives.

Gen. Pershing was given all material means possible. At his request, three American divisions (3rd, 78th, 80th) drawn from those under Marshal Haig, were transferred from the British zone of operations to the Meuse; the American 1st Army received from the French Army a certain amount of supplementary resources in artillery, ammunition, tanks, aviation, etc., and finally those French forces (three army corps) which were to co-operate in the American attack were placed under Gen. Pershing's command.

Eaton Removal Helps Merger Chances

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

CHANCES FOR THE COMPLETION of a merger of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation have been materially brightened as a result of the ousting of Cyrus S. Eaton from the helm of Continental Shares, Inc.

Eaton has been the principal stumbling block in the way of the merger. He was the leader in the battle for proxies to oppose the merger. It was Eaton who brought the suit asking for an injunction after he was beaten at the stockholders' meeting held to ratify the consolidation.

The injunction sought by Eaton was granted. Bethlehem Steel and officials of Youngstown Sheet and Tube have recently appealed the case.

Eaton's Position Changed

MOST STEEL MEN are of the opinion that the change in control of Continental Shares reflects the fact that Eaton's position has been weakened by unfavorable conditions in security markets. His removal from the presidency of the $156,000,000 holding company takes large blocks of Youngstown Sheet and Tube stock out of his hands. While it is unlikely that these are the only blocks held by Eaton, recent developments may give the interests at the head of Bethlehem and Youngstown Sheet and Tube a stronger grip and may make the Eaton interests more desirous of coming to terms.

At the close of 1930 Continental Shares had an investment of $4,699,444 in Youngstown Sheet and Tube stock. At prices prevailing at this time this represented about 67,000 shares.

This was not the only stock lost to Eaton. Continental Shares controls the Cliffs Corporation, which is reputed to hold about 125,800 shares of Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

Other Holdings Affected

IN COMPARISON WITH a total of 1,186,034 shares of Sheet and Tube outstanding, these blocks do not appear large. With other holdings and shares controlled by affiliated interests Eaton has been able to block the merger up to the present time. The loss of Continental Shares, however, eliminates the principal blocks of stocks held by Eaton, and it is rumored that other changes may have taken place in his holdings.

In view of the pronounced changes in the market values of stocks and in the earnings of Youngstown Sheet and Tube and in Bethlehem Steel, it is generally considered probable that a new merger agreement would have to be reached before a consolidation could take place. The making of a new agreement might also be expected to overcome the objections raised during the court proceedings.

Control of Republic

THE REMOVAL OF EATON from the presidency of Continental Shares may also have a profound effect on the control of Republic Iron and Steel and might conceivably change the alignment of this organization in any future steel mergers. Continental Shares and Cliffs Corporation held the principal Eaton blocks of stock in this corporation.

Stocks Decline — Local Market Steady

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO DECLINE

Shrinkage of Share Values Goes on Uninterrupted, But at Retarded Rate

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP.)—The shrinkage of share values was uninterrupted, but considerably retarded in today's stock market.

The recent stream of liquidation, which flooded most of the list yesterday, was narrowed down to the industrial and specialty issues in the main. Electric power issues held up fairly well and rails continued to decline only in spots.

U. S. Steel sold off a couple of points, then recovered partially. The market action of the stock reflected the fairly general opinion that the regular dividend would be announced after the close of the market.

It was felt in brokerage circles that liquidation of stock which had been pledged as collateral against loans by the two firms suspended in the past few days had been largely completed. Uncertainty over dividends, however, is said still to maintain an almost steady stream of sellers by investors. Although public utility dividends have in the main been regarded as secure, a reduction of Commonwealth and Southern's annual rate from 60 to 40 cents had been expected, in view of its recent earnings.

Remembering the stampede of short covering which marked the turn of the market as the December bottom was touched, bears have grown cautious. The amount of stock available to borrow for delivery against short commitments continues to decrease, although there is a question as to how real the scarcity is. At any rate, U. S. Steel has commanded a premium of 1-16 of a point among the loan crowd, the largest in recent years.

The steadier tone in the rails was partly in response to the growing appreciation, as earnings statements continue to appear, that the carriers made a substantially better showing in March than they did in the first two months of the year. In connection with the better tone in Standard of New Jersey, the annual earnings statement to appear shortly, is expected to show better than $2 a share. The oils as a group, however, remain friendless, as petroleum prices continue to sink. It is understood that several units in the industry are running in the red.

In the Standard Statistics Company index of 90 representative shares, the 20 utilities alone, taken as a group, hold well above the low level reached last December. Rails have dipped below that level to a new six-year bottom, and the industrials have dropped to a new low since the summer of 1927.

G. E. Special Stock May Be Called In

NEW YORK, April 28.—(AP.)—Dow, Jones & Co. said today that a reduction in General Electric Company's capital by retirement of the special stock, a preferred issue, was probable at this time.

The special shares, paying a 60-cent dividend, are callable on 90 days' notice at $11. The total par value of the issue is $42,929,635. The saving in dividends would be $2,574,000 annually.

On December 31 last, General Electric's cash account amounted to $141,717,851, and it was pointed out in Wall street that the company could redeem the special stock without serious impairment of its cash resources.

American Cotton Consumption Off

NEW YORK, April 28.—World consumption of American cotton in March totaled approximately 977,000 bales, an increase from the 904,000 bales consumed in February, according to the New oYrk Cotton Exchange service. The figure, however, showed a drop from 1,062,000 bales consumed in March of 1930. Consumption in the eight months of the season to March 31, totaled 7,358,000 bales, against 9,167,000 bales in the like period of the previous season. The increase in March over February was due primarily to the fact that there were more working days in March.

New Studebaker Director Elected

SOUTH BEND, April 28.—A. J. Chanter, general manager of the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company, has been elected a director of the Studebaker Corporation to succeed James H. Perkins. Other directors were re-elected.

A. R. Erskine, president of Studebaker Corporation, stated March sales exceeded those of any month since September, 1929, and April sales are expected to be still better.

EDSEL DENIES FORD CLOSING

DETROIT, April 28.—Denying a rumor that Ford Motor Company would close June 1, Edsel Ford, president, said:

"We have no plans for closing this summer. There may be a vacation shutdown, but we are not sure of that. At any rate, no date has been set. Our sales have been improving right along."

WINDSOR, Ont., April 28.—According to Wallace R. Campbell president of Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., the company gained in its percentage of registration in Canada in 1930 as compared with 1929. He expressed hope that tariff difficulties with New Zealand would be settled at the coming intra-empire conference.

Stock Exchange Topics

Standard Gas Has Been Showing Resistance Recently.

Standard Gas has been showing resistance in recent sessions. The stock is in the group which has not made new lows for the year during the periods of heavy general selling. One of the reasons that issue has not is to be found in the annual report, which showed earnings of $6.04 a share, or $2.54 in excess of the current dividend requirements of $3.50 per year. At current levels, the yield on the issue is approximately 5 per cent. The company is one of the big utilities of the country, with assets of $1,205,000,000, an increase of $114,000,000 from the preceding year.

Interest has been attracted to tobacco shares, because the increase of 6.9 per cent in cigaret production in March was the largest since last July. It was the third month since that time to show a gain. February recorded an increase of 4.3 per cent and December was up 5 per cent. Decreases were recorded for the other intervening months since last July. The figures are based on sales of tax stamps, and as most companies are not inclined to tie up their funds in such stamps, the totals are considered to represent actual sales.

Texas Corporation has been sold at the lowest price on record for the present shares, which is a reflection of doubt concerning the current $3 a share annual dividend. In fact, most of the talk heard in unusually well informed quarters is to the effect that the distribution is likely to be omitted by the directors next month. Earnings of the company have been affected adversely by trade conditions, and rumors have been heard that a deficit of around $4,000,000 is likely for the first quarter of this year. Lower prices for its products have reduced the value of the large inventories carried by the company, which would affect revenues.

In New York money circles there was little disposition to attach any great importance to the announcement that Chancellor Snowden has decided upon complete withdrawal of his balances of £33,000,000 or the equivalent of roughly $165,000,000 which had been maintained here for a long period. This news, however, tended to explain some of the heavy demand which has been apparent in the foreign exchange market for sterling of late. The British chancellor is taking directly home £20,000,000 or $100,000,000 of his credits here and has announced the balance of £13,000,000 or $65,000,000 will be deposited with the bank of international settlements. Money brokers pointed to the enormous credit facilities available here in the form of our huge monetary gold stocks, and were moved to comment that it might help things if the transfer of British capital could be made in gold.

The process is painful to say the least, but the current crop of insolvencies is not entirely without its bright side. Wall street has listed time and again to recurrence of rumors involving the stability of this house and that, and at least the passing of the weakened firms will serve to clear the atmosphere and remove the uncertainty which has been prevalent in the market place ever since the closing quarter of last year. The insolvencies themselves are the usual aftermath of a situation such as had been built up in 1929. We had a similar situation following in the wake of the post-war bull market and undoubted. will have them in other future episodes of the sort when fancies for a time replace facts to the detriment of the market's good health.

The balance of the week is slated to bring action on the dividends of a number of the larger corporations. Wednesday the American Tobacco board will consider its quarterly dividend and possibly give some thought to the wisdom of an extra at this time. Thursday the Bethlehem Steel board will meet and Nickel Plate directors also will consider quarterly payment then due and the prospects are not considered especially bright in either case. Friday, on the turn of the month, Radio directors will act on the preferred dividend and two of the leading oil companies, namely Standard of New Jersey and Standard of New York, will take action if schedule is followed.

Insurance Agents Plan May Drive

Life insurance companies in Pittsburgh today were making plans to participate in a national drive to write 25 per cent more business in May than they wrote in the same period last year. H. T. Burnett, vice chairman of the agencies' committee of the Pittsburgh Life Underwriters' Association, was pledged full co-operation by managers of 20 agencies.

THE SECRET SIX -:- By Frances Marion

Gang Hires Pretty Girl To Quiet Reporters

CHAPTER XVII.

A sensational melodramatic story of the underworld, adapted from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan picture.

Scorpio looked meditatively after the disappearing deaf mute and the boy. He liked that boy—still here he was, sending him to his death. For, as soon as the boy had done what he was bidden, the silent Metz would seal his lips forever—with a bullet. Then the gang leader shrugged. After all, it was all in the game. That's what they took boys into the gang for—to shoot, throw away the weapon and run—and be "bumped off" by another gangster lest they "squeal." It was a good system. Anyhow—there were other things to think about now. That party, for instance. He would be pretty late.

Entering the steak house again, he met Miszoski, all dressed and ready for the party. The two grinned.

"That Carson gang will be pretty sore, I guess," remarked the Gouger.

"Sure," rejoined Scorpio. Both men turned to congratulatory followers.

Reporters Meet

Carl, closeted with his boss, Markham, after the meeting of the Secret Six, was briefly apprised of the result of the Centro election and what it meant, and, with these facts in mind, had started for the Scorpio headquarters when he bumped into Hank, apparently on the same errand.

"Well," remarked Carl, "Scorpio will have plenty to say now—we'll get a real earful." Hank eyed his companion. "I think I'll ride that big ape," he remarked. "This is a pretty raw deal—and Carl, I don't like to preach or give advice—but aren't you getting pretty deep in with them?"

Carl shrugged his shoulders.

"Didn't I read a story by you, whitewashing that outfit?" he parried.

"That was a couple of months ago—before I got next," insisted Hank. "But I've changed my mind since I've seen a few things around that dump. I like you, Carl—and I'm worried. You know it's not in the newspaper game—getting tarred with that brush. Some day they'll have you in a spot where you'll ... e to sell out your paper—"

"It looks to me," interrupted Carl, "as though you've kind of fallen for that blonde at the cashier's desk, and are a little jealous of Scorpio." Hank flushed with sudden rage. "What are you trying to insinuate?" he demanded hotly, ignoring the other's bantering manner. "I'm nuts about that dame and we're going to get married. Don't make any cracks about her."

"No offense, Hank," he declared, and, quickening his pace entered the steak house ahead of the other man.

"Hello, Scorpio, congratulations!" he greeted the gang leader. Then, turning to the Gouger, "How about an interview with the big intellectual heavy of Centro?" Miszoski grinned and indicated a private booth. Hank approached Scorpio.

"Ah! My old pal Hank!" greeted Scorpio, as Newton stepped in from an adjoining booth. Hank nodded coldly. "Hello, Slaughterhouse," he answered.

"Mr. Scorpio," Newton remarked suavely, with a very slight accent on the "Mr." "might care to say a few words about the Centro election."

Hank looked the lawyer over, then turned to Scorpio.

"What's on your mind, Slaughterhouse?" he asked, contemptuously.

Scorpio Gets Generous

Again rage flared within Scorpio. He'd never liked Hank since that night of the Franks killing. The reporter, he felt, had tried to railroad him to jail then.

"Er—well— Come inside," Newton suggested, indicating one of the booths in the restaurant. Wonderingly, Hank followed him, as Newton watched, the shadow of a smile on his thin face. Newton, it was easy to see, had directed the move, whatever it was.

Inside the booth Scorpio drew from his pocket a thin flat package.

"I like all you newspaper boys," remarked the gang ruler, "and you and Carl have been mighty fine to me from the time I didn't amount to nothing up to now, when I'm getting up in the world. So I want to show you my appreciation—and here is a little present for you—to remember me by."

Inside the case was an elaborate carved gold cigaret case. In its center, studded with diamonds, was a monogrammed "H" and below it was engraved—

"To my old pal Hank—from his good friend Scorpio."

Hank looked admiringly at the handsome thing, turned it over in his hands, then curiously snapped it open. It was filled—but not with white cigarets. The tubes packed into it were green.

He picked one out and unrolled it, then gasped in amazement.

For in the case, rolled up to resemble cigarets in shape—were 10 crisp new thousand-dollar bills!

Refuses Gift

Hank fingered the bills for a moment with a puzzled frown, then comprehension dawned. Carefully placing the folded bill back into the cigaret case, he handed it to the dumbfounded Scorpio.

"Sorry," he stated coldly, "but that's not in my line, Slaughterhouse." Without waiting to hear the other's protestations he stepped into the restaurant, a look of resolve on his face. Straight to the cigar counter he strode, and confronted Anne.

"Where's your hat? You're going to get out of here."

"What's the matter, Hank? Are you crazy?"

"Sure. About you, honey. We're going to get married."

"But Hank!"

"Don't argue about it—we'll argue after we get you out of here and in that two-roomed mansion of ours."

"But darling," faltered Anne.

"Never mind—I know it's so sudden. But I love you and you love me, and why kid ourselves about it?"

"What's happened?"

"Nothing yet — but it will darned quick," grimly retorted Hank. "I know that much now, and I don't want you here when it does happen." He beckoned to one of the waiters. "Take the counter—we're off," he instructed. A step behind him caused him to turn. Scorpio was there, eyeing him through narrow lids.

"Say, you ain't leaving here?" demanded Scorpio of the girl. Hank answered for her. "We're goin' to get spliced," he informed the gang leader.

"Married!" ejaculated Scorpio, between howls of merriment. "Married! Gosh! It's funnier than a show!"

Hank flared in anger.

"What's so darned funny about that?" he grated.

"I don't mean funny—not in that sense," parried Scorpio. "Of course—gettin' married is swell, really it is—and it took me by surprise. Why! I feel like a great big Cupid!"

Anne flashed the man a startled glance. Scorpio went on:

"Wasn't it me that brought you two love birds together? Go and tell him about it, Anne—let him laugh his head off like the rest of us!" Anne stared at him, a sort of terror in her eyes. Hank was watching Scorpio sharply.

"Here a little while ago Johnny Franks hires Anne from the drug store—just soz she could get her hooks into you two reporters!" chortled Scorpio. "We paid her good money to keep you guys feeling good—and laying off us in the papers—and everybody here giving you the horse laugh! And here you go and cop the girl—right under our noses! Well—more power to you, Hank, old pal!"

Hank, with terrible coldness, searched her eyes with his eyes.

"Then it's true—isn't it?" he demanded.

Anne's words poured out in a torrent.

Anne Admits Truth

"Yes, it's true—that is, at first," she cried. "I was paid to come here to hook you—they were all laughing, just as he said. And then—you were such a square shooter—so different from these others. You're the first man who was ever decent to me. I loved you. And now I've lost you—you hate me!"

"No," answered Hank slowly. "I don't hate you. I was one of those wise guys, and laughing at everybody else. Now the laugh's on me—that's all." He turned to leave. With a wail, Anne blocked his way.

"I'm crazy about you, Hank—you've got to believe that!" she pleaded. "I know it started out to be a rotten deal—but that was before I really knew you—before I loved you. But it's different now. You can't leave me now—I couldn't stand it without you."

Hank, deadly cold, looked past the girl with flinty eyes, as he removed her hands from his arm.

"Better peddle it to somebody else," he remarked, in a dull, lifeless voice, as he started toward the street door.

Anne started back, as though physically struck. The hurt look in her eyes was supplanted by the fire of anger, as his biting contempt sunk into her consciousness, and fanned the primitive in her to a white heat.

"All right!" she shrilled. "To Hell with you—that's what I think about you! I don't care if I never see you again—I hate you! Hate you!"

With a choking sob she dashed into the dressing room behind the cigar counter.

DAILY TRUE STORY — His Ship Came In

Lumber Expert Is Forced To Return to Wife

Mr. Jerome Nutting, with his eternal air of superiority, inspected the last of the great planks of oak brought to the shipyard and nodded.

"Very good, my men—very good," he said, brushing his hands with his handkerchief and sauntering away.

Matt Gordon blinked at Pete Lang and shook his head.

"Suave—what?" said Matt.

"Er——I don't know about that," Peter answered.

"Matt means," Joe Carter put in, "that the guy is grandiloquent."

"You're both wrong," Peter said, earnestly, "that bird is just a pain in the neck."

Matt and Joe laughed and gave Peter an approving slap on his broad shoulders.

"Peter had expressed our sentiments toward Jerome Nutting with greater clarity that either of us," Matt exclaimed.

"Aw, quit talking big words that don't mean anything and get busy with me on these here keels," Peter invited, with a grin.

Peter was 40 and he had been working 25 of those years in the South Bristol shipyard of Weymouth Brothers. He could do more things to ship lumber with an adz than Rodin could do to marble with mallet and chisel.

Matt and Joe were working their way through Bowdoin. This was their third summer at the yard.

Mr. Jerome Nutting was a newcomer since the previous summer. He came from Staten Island, he said. There was no reason to doubt it.

Efficient Employe

When Matt and Joe started to work in the yard on the first day of vacation they noticed Nutting strolling about. He seemed to be too well dressed for a workman.

"Who is he, some party having a yacht built?" Matt had asked Peter.

"Him have a yacht built? Naw, he couldn't afford to have a punt built. He's a lumber inspector and he acts like he owned the place."

"Snooty?" asked Joe.

"Naw — just slick. Pleasant enough, if you like his kind. He knows lumber, though. Guess he's saved the company plenty," Peter explained, always ready to be more than fair to anyone.

"How's the chow over at Mary's? I saw her sign was still there," Joe said.

"Nobody ever cooked better grub than Mary," Peter assured them.

"You were rather sweet on Mary last summer, Peter. How about it now?" Matt asked.

"Mary's all right," Peter answered gruffly.

He began talking of other things. This wasn't like Peter. He used to talk eloquently about the fine qualities of Mary Weston the previous summer.

Mary Weston's rather pretty little cottage was on a point of land above the yard. Some distance from this a building that had once been a store owned by Mary's father was turned into a "dining room," according to the sign.

Beneath this was "M. Weston, Prop."

Sarcastic Question

Matt and Joe had always had their meals there, as did others. Mary usually had about 20 steady boarders. Mary served meals, but did not have roomers. Matt and Joe generally found a suitable room near the yard.

After this first day's work the boys went to their room, where they left their belongings that morning, slicked up a bit and walked down to Mary's for supper.

Mary served breakfast, dinner and supper, in that order.

Now, Mary kept able girls to wait on table and help in the kitchen, but she usually supervised the place during meals, coming out and chatting, for practically all of her patrons were acquaintances.

As Matt and Joe went in, Mary's back was toward them. She was talking with Mr. Jerome Nutting.

"Well, it is a great industry. All in good time, when my ship comes in, I shall go into that business on a mammoth scale."

"Which way is that there ship of yours headin' now?" Peter asked.

"In my direction," Nutting answered, blandly, refusing to notice the bitter sarcasm in Peter's voice; "yes, sir, in my direction. I have—uh—certain investments which cannot fail to bring mammoth returns."

To Help Friend

He flecked off some cigar ashes, gave them a cheerful "good night" and sauntered away. He never seemed to walk, he sauntered leisurely.

"Him and his so-and-so ship," Peter growled. "He's always telling about his ship coming in. He's always putting on airs. You'd think we was working for him 'stead of for the Weymouth brothers."

"Now, Peter!"

"Aw, now, Mary, you know he's just a four-flushing pain in the neck, always talking about how many millions he'll have when his ship comes in," Peter protested.

"Well, he never says a disagreeable thing about anyone, Peter, and that's a good trait."

She disappeared into the dining room again. Peter hung around. The boys strolled down the street.

"The plot," Matt said, "is an old one. Our good friend Peter is being, or has been, cut out, as it were. The oily Mr. Nutting has turned Mary's head."

"A nicely feathered nest for Mr. Nutting, cosy cottage excellent food, charming lady of no more than 30," Joe said.

"We shall see what we shall see—if we may lend a hand for good old Peter, we shall do it."

"Right, Matt."

During the weeks that followed they heard a great deal about the ship that was coming in for Jerome Nutting.

He was constantly talking about it.

One evening Matt and Joe overheard Peter saying to Mary Weston, "There's a good picture tonight, they say. Suppose we go and see it, Mary."

"Sorry, Peter, I'd love to go with you of course, but Jerome asked me to go with him—he asked me yesterday."

"All right," Peter said, and he hurried away.

One evening the boys, with Peter, were loafing in the corner poolroom, or rather on the front steps, for they had finished their games. Nutting came along and stopped to chat.

"I am feeling rather exalted tonight," he said.

"Don't tell me your ship is in!" Joe exclaimed.

"That will be in soon. My investments are beginning to pay. The cause of my elation at the moment is that Miss Weston has done me the honor to accept my proposal of marriage."

There was an embarrassing moment of silence. Matt came to the rescue quite diplomatically.

"I'm sure we congratulate you," he said, "and wish you all the luck you deserve."

The following week was one of abject misery for Peter Lang.

When Mary mentioned her engagement to Matt he made her indignant by saying, "Sorry it isn't Peter—he's regular."

Only a few days later when the boys came over for dinner they were grinning broadly.

Ship Arrives

Peter came in with the first smile he had cracked in three weeks.

Finally, just before it was time for the 1 o'clock whistle to blow calling them back to work, Mary asked, rather anxiously:

"Where is Jerome?"

Matt, Joe and Peter looked back and forth at each other.

"Tell her, Matt," Peter said.

"Mr. Nutting won't be here any more, Mary. His ship came in this forenoon," Matt said, blandly.

"Why, what do you mean?"

"It was the schooner Edna Jay. The skipper had his sister with him—"

"But I don't see—"

"And the skipper's sister happened to be Mrs. Jerome Nutting. She took him away with her. She'd been hunting for him for a year."

"Is this true?" Mary asked.

It was.

The shock didn't jar Mary very much evidently, for she married Peter a month later. Matt and Joe drove down from Bowdoin to attend the ceremonies. Their gift to the bride was a handsome carving set, fitted into the hold of a handsome ship model.

Universal Studios have sent a man on a tour of leading universities to pick out likely young students who will be offered scholarships in motion picture training.

Why not try an exchange plan — send collegians to the studios and send film executives to college?

If the film executives went to college they'd soon gain control and have the professors in literature rewriting Shakespeare.

SUCCESS No. 3456

This is Mister Glutz, who has perfected a chewing gum that extracts gold fillings. Glutz will obtain a concession to distribute sticks of his gum to patrons who enter drug stores. He will then salvage the gum found under soda fountain counters, and sell it to the U. S. Smelting Corporation.

DUET FOR TRAP DRUMS AND PICCOLO

We're asked twenty times every evening
By sobsters who sing on the radio
To weep if we can for the poor hired man
Who's working these days as a gigilo;
They're standing in cake-lines by thousands
And though they wear silks, underneath
Their lily-white skins, full of cordials and gins,
They're just as miserable with women as though they were married—the chief difference being that these so-and-sos get paid a high living wage, while you and I ain't got the slightest idea where our next chocolate nut sundae is coming from.

Signs of Good Times

States Spend More on Roads, Production Gains, Raskob Sees Recovery.

Pennsylvania leads all other states in appropriations for highway expenditures this year according to the American Road Builders' Association. This is good news for the unemployed and also for motorists.

Throughout the entire country state highway departments will contribute nearly a billion dollars to give employment to the jobless by improving roads. In nearly every case more money is to be spent this year than last year. New York and Louisiana follow closely on the heels of Pennsylvania in the amounts of their appropriations.

Another piece of good news is to be found in the fact that industrial operations in the Pittsburgh district gained last month and that some improvement was recorded in employment conditions. This was shown in a survey prepared by the United States Department of Labor.

The report declared that plants at McKeesport, McKees Rocks, Butler, Donora and Monessen increased their payrolls in March.

Further encouragement was given by John J. Raskob who believes that we are practically through with all the liquidation necessary to establish business on a bedrock foundation. Before departing for Europe he said:

"We should be courageous now, not fearful. The time for fear was in 1928 and 1929, when everyone was so bullish that we all were blinded to the castastrophe ahead of us."

Service Charge Unfair

Company Gets Paid for Water and Then Exacts $8 Yearly in Addition.

Just now, while the state lawmakers are concerned with the affairs of various public utilities, both in the way of investigation by a House committee, D. Glenn Moore, of Washington, chairman, and in proposed legislation covered by the administration fair-rate board bill, seems an opportune time to ask our legislators to consider the matter of the "service charge," so-called. This charge is one that seems especially unfair in communities in the vicinity of Pittsburgh served by the South Pittsburgh Water Company.

The service charge of this company is $8 per year, payable quarterly when the water bills are rendered. It is not a charge for water consumed. Consumers pay plenty for that commodity on top of the outrageous service charge of $2 every quarter. Former residents of the city proper who have moved to southern suburbs (perhaps others, too), find that the rate for water alone is high, compared to the city rate, and when they are called upon to pay for a "service" that is no different from that rendered by the city for no extra charge they feel that somebody is "getting away with murder."

Actually, no service is rendered for the charge made. The company merely supplies its patrons with the commodity it has for sale and charges more for that commodity than the city does.

We believe this is a good time for the officials of Dormont, Mt. Lebanon and other communities to make a fight against this unfair charge.

Real Rapid Transit

Pittsburgh to New York in About Three Hours Is New Schedule.

Pittsburgh will get real rapid transit Friday, when the Pittsburgh Airways, Inc., a wholly local enterprise, begins a new rapid air service from this city to Philadelphia and New York. Approximate flying time between the aerial terminals will be one-and-one-half hours to Philadelphia and two hours to New York. There will be return trips equally as rapid and the schedule provides for four planes daily in each direction.

The time given is that for flight alone. Getting to and from the airport will require 30 minutes here. Since Newark is the New York terminal the trip may take more time there, but it seems reasonable to assume that three hours will be all that is required to go from the heart of Pittsburgh to the heart of New York.

Nobody has to have pointed out the advantages in this. They are obvious. It will be possible to go to New York, transact business and be back home in time for dinner. Or leave in the late afternoon, attend a show and be back in time for business next day.

The Pittsburgh Airways, Inc., should be commended for its enterprise. Pittsburgh is to be congratulated on getting this modern transportation service as a local undertaking.

Bids Too Near Alike

City Complains That There Seems to Be No Competition In Concrete.

Some time ago the Board of Public Education intimated there was collusion among the electrical contractors of the city, the conclusion being based on the fact that there appeared to be no difference in the several bids submitted for electrical work in the schools. Now there is complaint from the city concerning concrete bids. Thomas M. Benner, assistant city solicitor, said bids were so similar that they had been rejected twice. Dealers said the bids are alike because all use the same basic price.

Nobody can object if dealers refuse to compete with one another to such an extent that they would undercut each other so much that the business obtained would be unprofitable. But if the bids indicate that there is collusion to obtain an unfair price, the matter should be investigated.

Two British Types

Old Fashion and New Fashion.

BALDWIN—OLD STYLE. BEAVERBROOK—NEW STYLE.

These pictures of fighting Britishers at a political meeting interest Americans, because the whole world is interested in England's struggle to "come back" industrially.

Baldwin, head of the old-fashioned Tory party, born in England, all his thinking methods developed in England, believes that England should be saved according to old Tory ideas, and saved, of course, BY HIM.

Beaverbrook, born in Canada, took some modern ideas of the North American continent to England with him. He made his own career, including a great fortune, the ownership of important British newspapers, and an important place in war statesmanship.

Baldwin believes that the British Empire is something attached to the little foggy island, off the northwest coast of Europe, and that all wisdom has spread from that little island to the gigantic empire.

Beaverbrook, born across the ocean, feels that the Empire is a thing and the British islands only a part of it.

Beaverbrook is fighting an uphill fight in favor of "Free Trade Within the Empire."

He wants all parts of the British Empire to trade with each other, free of tariff restrictions, as all the states of our Union trade with each other freely, no custom houses between them.

The theory encounters a powerful opponent in human selfishness.

There is no doubt, however, that Beaverbrook is starting a new and big plan; Baldwin striving to maintain a small and old plan.

The new, big thing usually wins.

MICHELSON'S LAST EXPERIMENT

By Archibald Henderson

The scientific world just now is awaiting with intense interest the announcement of the results of the scientific experiment which Michelson says will be his last. He is now working on the self-same experiment with which his scientific career began—the determination of the velocity of light. From his sick bed, whereon he has lain for weeks, he is directing this important experiment, which is being efficiently carried out by his assistants. The experiment, it seems, will be conducted six different times, in order to eliminate all chances of error. Beams of light are to be raced in a vacuum a mile long. The vacuum tube, probably the largest ever hitherto constructed by a scientist, is a line of pipe 5,280 feet long and 3 feet in diameter. This vacuum eliminates the necessity for making even the slight corrections for temperature and moisture content of the air, which enter when the light ray is sent in the open from mountain peak to mountain peak. Already the figure for the velocity of light, formerly computed by Michelson, is the figure accepted by all scientists, namely 186,284 miles per second.

Albert Abraham Michelson was born in Strelno, Poland, on December 19, 1852. He was brought to this country by his parents when he was two years old. As a lad of 17, he won an appointment to the Naval Academy; but in order to secure it he had to go all the way from San Francisco to Washington, to persuade President Grant to give him the appointment. When he was first appointed an instructor in physics at Annapolis by Admiral Sampson, he was not particularly interested in the science; but he actually invested $10 of his own money to construct an apparatus to measure the speed of light in a classroom demonstration. To his own surprise and gratification, he succeeded in making a more accurate determination of the velocity than had ever before been achieved. His interest in physics and in science now thoroughly aroused, he resigned from the Navy and spent two years studying at Berlin, Heidelberg and Paris.

During his recent visit to this country, Einstein paid high tribute to Michelson. He has recently been called one of the greatest physicists of all time, and the world's leading authority in the field of optics. His name has been mentioned by scientists along with the names of Newton and Einstein. It is well known that he started Einstein on the theory of relativity with an experiment first performed in 1883, in which he and Prof. Morley, of the Case School of Applied Sciences in Cleveland, raced one beam of light against another in the effort to measure the velocity of the earth through space. The race was a dead heat, to the amazement of physicists everywhere.

Prof. Michelson has made many important contributions to science, and is particularly ingenious in inventing instruments of high precision for carrying out his experiments. In 1920 he measured the giant red star Betelgeuse, and showed that star to have a diameter 300 times that of the sun. In conjunction with Prof. Henry Gordon Gale, and utilizing the facts of tidal action, he demonstrated that the earth is as rigid as steel. One of his earliest experiments was to determine the length of the meter in terms of the red ray of cadmium, thus establishing a unit that could never be destroyed.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

There are many varieties of ornery humans in this world, all of them blighters. But the orneriest and the blightingest of them all is the Benevolent Belittler.

Now, the Regular Belittler is easy to detect. He's an obvious pest . . . a conceited harper, with nothing veiled about his method. There's a sneer to his eye and a sniff to his nose which you can recognize a block away. And if you linger around and let him make life miserable for you, it's your own fault.

But the Benevolent Belittler is quite another matter. Gossip or backbite? Not he. Such tactics are beneath him. Indeed, you can see at a glance that all human pettiness is beneath him. For his manner is that of a Visiting Board of Directors. Or of an intimate friend—a much wiser, quite superior sort of an intimate friend—but most kindly.

His courtesy . . . his concern for your welfare . . . is exquisite. And, at first, you're tickled pink by his flattering attentions. You babble on, telling him all your secret designs and desires. He listens gravely—nods with appreciation and understanding. Your spirits mount. Here, at last, is a congenial soul! You expand. You confess certain small matters. You boast. You explain how you Do Things.

And then—the Benevolent Belittler begins to do his stuff.

It's only a word. A careful, most considerate word. A mere suggestion, concerning your way of Doing Things. The slightest mention of how He, Himself, Does Things . . . how People Who Know, Do Things. Do Things better than you do them.

Only a word . . . a helpful word . . . surely a friendly word? For you can see he's right. Yes, that is a better way of doing things. Then why aren't you glad that you have learned this better way? Why aren't you grateful to him for telling you about it? You ought to be ashamed of yourself—getting all smoked up just because he gives you a little advice! You ARE ashamed. It's great of him to be so interested . . . to be so willing to help . . .

Again you warm to your subject. And again—a little sooner this time—the Benevolent Belittler breaks in. Yes, indeed, you have some good ideas—he condescendingly admits. But after all, if you want to do the thing Right—

Then he's off. Word by word he tears your notions to pieces and substitutes his own. No mean words, mind you. No open, cruel criticism. Dignified, amiable syllables, every one of them. But how do you feel when he's through?

You feel like thirty cents!

AND THAT'S EXACTLY HOW HE WANTED YOU TO FEEL.

For the Benevolent Belittler has but one desire—TO MAKE HIMSELF FEEL BIG BY MAKING YOU FEEL LITTLE. His benevolence is but a mask for his malice and conceit. He isn't interested in you. He isn't trying to help you. He's just trying to make you feel cheap by strutting his superior stuff. And if you have an atom of sense, you'll call his bluff.

Extinct Volcano

The great hills, rising, form a circle here,
Green-clad and gently sloping from each crest;
Alike the farthest hill and that most near
In April's vivid loveliness are dressed.
Far, far above uprose its lofty height,
And deep within, a strange and awful place,
Wild fires raged through timeless, starless night.
No man knows when the great eruption came
That tore the breast of Earth asunder wide,
No history records the rocks, smoke, flame,
The lava flow, the gas by which men died.
So well have busy Time and Nature wrought
These hillside farms hold not one tragic thought.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 28.—The Rialto, despite a skimpy year, managed to squeeze out a batch of new favorites, chief of which is Lou Holz's find, Lyda Roberti, the Polish maid with pulled taffy hair and sky blue eyes. She was a war waif bobbing about the old world—struggling for the proverbial crust.

Her Polish accent plus a charming naivete won a husky huzzah. She had only a few lines and a song, but she made them hum. Another dazzler came out of Russia. She is Eugenie Leontovitch who in "Grand Hotel" was lifted to the heights largely by a realistic telephone conversation.

Ginger Rogers is a Texas village red-head, dewy with girlish freshness, who quite ran away with a featured part in "Girl Crazy." She bubbled a joyousness that captured the crowd and it is not improbable next season may see her name etched in lights on the Broadway horizon.

Jimmy Durante for several years has been a rowdy knock-about comic in the cheaper cabarets with a trio known as Clayton, Jackson and Durante. Clayton and Jackson are merely foils for his rough-housing didoes. Durante became the highspot of an all-star cast in "The New Yorkers."

He is without pretensions—a jovial vulgarian whose clownings are built for the most part around his extraordinarily large nose or "schnozzle." Yet underneath it all is a Chaplinesque wistfulness. Audiences have a feeling that somewhere among their guffawing shimmers a salty tear.

Ivor Norvello is a comparative newcomer, a New York lad who went to England to be acclaimed. He appeared in his own play with Billie Burke. Enthusiasts hail him as "an embryo Noel Coward." There is also that magnificent English entrant, Herbert Marshall. And the superb vaudevillians—Burns and Allen.

While it has been a bright season for names hitherto little known, many of the old standbys have endured a seasonal eclipse. Quite a number opened and closed on Broadway within a week. But it is such sudden descents and ascents that glamour the stage with romance. Sudden winds in a dead canvas!

Incidentally, one producer in withdrawing an opus after a few days' run notified the press thus: "Due to the phenomenal indifference of the public, this show closes Saturday."

A sparkling modernistic apartment building on Central Park West offers a gradation of coloring that, when emblazoned by the sun, is an astonishing architectural plume in the Manhattan skyline. It begins in vivid brown and sweeping upward several stories fades into azure pink. Then bright yellow which tones gradually to soft beige until it reaches the pinnacle which is oyster white. It recalls those marvelously tinted pousse cafes "Silver King" used to fashion for gallants in the dead and gone days of the Knickerbocker bar.

There was another luminous concoction at the old Knickerbocker that glistened even in the surrounding wetness. It was called a "Colonel Appleton"—a jigger of brandy shaded green by frapped creme de menthe and served in delicately flanged silver cups, fairly dripping frosty globules. Floating on top was a bright cherry tucked in a sprig of mint. They were 60 cents a copy. Two and you mellowed to buy for the house or became nasty and got slapped in the face with a sour bar rag.

They were discussing a certain writer noted for slovenly attire. One gentleman said that while he read him regularly he found him wishey-washey. "He may be wishey," observed Irvin Cobb, "but I never thought him overly washey."

And that reminds me a young enthusiast in Denver writes today to know what I regard as the three essentials of writing. Without much thought, and saving a stamp I reply: No. 1—a pencil. No. 2—a sheet of paper. No. 3—an idea.

P. S. Don't get worked up over No. 3. Many get along fairly well without it. Or have you noticed?

The Grand Duchess Marie, despite the bravura of her royal training, seems to fit into her avenue sales job nicely. In the salon where she waits on trade I asked her a question, recognizing her from her pictures with a start when she replied. I don't know what she said. Indeed I cannot recall what I asked her. Duchesses affect me that way.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Why write an anonymous letter?

If you have something to say that is worth while saying, sign your own name to it.

Have the courage of your convictions.

If you are not willing to sign your name to a communication sent to another, you are playing the part of a coward.

They have no moral stamina.

They hit and run.

They are too dishonorable to come out in the open.

Some anonymous letter-writers are too ignorant and irresponsible to know just what is thought of such methods.

Some school children at an early period develop a penchant for signed notes.

Some weak characters, with silly minds, act upon anonymous suggestions.

But a well balanced, honest and honorable citizen never stoops to an anonymous document of any sort.

If you have ever written one you know you thought yourself a sneak.
